PEARL HARBOR REPORT IS NEAR, SAYS PRESIDENT

Hasn't Decided if He Will Suppress It.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Jan. 23.—President Roosevelt disclosed at his press conference today that he expects to receive very soon the report of the Roberts board he sent to Hawaii to investigate and establish the responsibility for the disaster suffered by the United States in the Japanese surprise attack of Dec. 7.

The board has returned from Hawaii and its chairman, Associate Justice Owen J. Roberts of the United States Supreme court, stated today that he is writing the report.

Asked if the report would be made public the President said he didn't know. Presumably he conceives that there are circumstances which would render it inadvisable for him to reveal the findings of the board to the people and that he cannot decide that question until he reads the report.

One Reason for Suppression.

The only conceivable reason for suppression of the report would be that it contained information of value to the enemy. That it might be suppressed to protect persons in high places from exposure as blameworthy for the disaster is a possibility that does not square with the implied assurance by the executive in appointing the Roberts board that there would be no whitewash and that no person, no matter how highly placed, would be spared.

The board of inquiry was appointed by Mr. Roosevelt on Dec. 16, when the rising tide of indignation in congress made it apparent that there would be an investigation by that body, if the executive failed to act. In addition to Justice Roberts the members of the board are Rear Adm. William H. Standley, retired, former chief of naval operations; Rear Adm. Joseph M. Reeves, retired, former commander in chief of the United States fleet; Maj. Gen. Frank R. McCoy, retired, and Brig. Gen. Joseph P. McNarney of the army air crops.

Three Weeks of Hearings.

The board reached Honolulu within a week and proceeded to take exhaustive testimony from the armed services and also from civilian sources. Approximately three weeks were devoted to the taking of testimony alone.

The only official judgment so far passed on the Pearl Harbor disaster is that of Secretary of the Navy Frank Knox, later indorsed by Secretary of War Henry L. Stimson. Col. Knox flew to Hawaii, made a three day investigation and on his return stated that the army and navy forces in Hawaii were "not on the alert against the surprise attack." And that the President would appoint a board of inquiry. On Dec. 17 the President relieved of their commands Adm. Husband E. Kimmel, commander in chief of the Pacific fleet, Lieut. Gen. Walter C. Short, commander of the Hawaiian department of the army, and Maj. Gen. Frederick L. Martin, commander of the army air force in Hawaii.

In view of Secretary Knox's statement that the army and navy were not on the alert these three commanding officers were by inference accused of responsibility for the disaster, but the administration explained that they had been relieved

JAPAN REVEALS AIM TO EXPLOIT SEIZED LANDS

Would Bar Exports to U. S., Britain.

TOKIO, Jan. 23 [Official Broadcast Recorded by Associated Press].—A complete program for exploiting captured territory and blockading the United States and Britain from rubber, tin and hemp was presented to the Japanese diet today by Teiichi Suzuki, president of the planning board.

At the same session Foreign Minister Shigenori Togo said that Japan had received assurances from the soviet government that Russia would observe her neutrality pact with Japan.

Premier Gen. Hideki Tojo proclaimed that Japan would gain further victories because it has enough manpower, training and materials for the war. He said that in quantity of men "Japan tops the world."

"Not Afraid of America."

"That is the reason," he added, "why I am not afraid of America, altho I do not dismiss lightly the huge military expenditure called for in President Roosevelt's message to congress.

"So long as we have men trained in 3,000 years of history, we will not be defeated by America, which relies on material strength, because after all war is fought by men."

Tojo also reiterated Japanese willingness to accept any overtures from Chungking, China, for peaceful reconciliation if that régime changes its attitude.

He declared that past faults in China would vanish with the disappearance of Anglo-American influence and added, "Now is the time for China's leaders to awaken and I take this occasion to urge them to do so."

Military Currency Planned.

Suzuki, outlining the development of Japanese conquests in the South Pacific, said the government will decide what resources are to be developed. The products will be taken by the government for its material mobilization program, he said, and only competent and experienced industrialists will be permitted to develop oil, mineral and agricultural resources, altho not as development companies or partnerships.

Military currency, equal to the local currency, would be circulated in each occupied territory. The export of capital from Japan would be prohibited but capital needed for industrial development would be provided by the government.

Only those persons "who can prove their ability to contribute constructively to the creation of the new economic order in East Asia will be permitted to proceed to the occupied areas," he said.

Points to Burma Drive.

Domei agency said that the occupation of bases on New Guinea and the Solomon Islands was not yet officially confirmed. Attention was called to the Burmese front where the agency said the advance of Japanese troops will "have far-reaching consequences which will become evident in the near future."

It was indicated that the goal of the Burmese push was the Burma road to Chungking. The agency said loss of the road will make the position of Chinese forces "practically hopeless."

Chinese bombardment of French Indo-China was "regarded here as a mere demonstration," it said.

Another report from Domei said the Japanese commander in chief at Manila had ordered Mayor Jorge B. Vargas to form a new administration.

Predicts Soviet Aid for China.

LONDON, Jan. 23 (AP).—Dr. V. K. Wellington Koo, Chinese ambassador to London, declared today that "in my opinion it is only a question of time" before Russia intervenes in the western Pacific theater of war.

China realizes that the "soviet union is bearing the brunt of the fighting against the aggressive forces in Europe," he told a press conference, and added that he felt confident that when the moment came the soviet union would do her part in the "east and in Asia."

INDICATES NAVY SINKING U-BOATS

Spokesman Hints Coastal Waters Being Cleared.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Jan. 23.—Some of the enemy submarines which have been raiding off the Atlantic coast have taken a one way trip to watery graves, a navy spokesman said today.

In intimating raiding U-boats have been sunk or captured, the spokesman answered questions as to what the navy has been doing while the undersea craft have been active near the American shore.

The spokesman was not specific in his assertion the navy has the situation in hand in conformance with the policy enunciated by President Roosevelt of maintaining silence on successes against submarines in order to undermine enemy morale. This was done during the World war.

Unofficial Reports Cited.

"There are many rumors and unofficial reports about the capture or destruction of enemy submarines," the navy spokesman said. "Some of the recent visitors to our territorial waters will never enjoy the return trip portion of their voyage.

"Furthermore, the percentage of one-way traffic is increasing, while that of two-way traffic is satisfactorily on the decline. But there will be no information given out about the fate of enemy excursionists who don't get home until that information is no longer of aid or comfort to the enemy."

The spokesman said this is a phase of the game of war secrecy in which every American should join with enthusiasm.

Termed Valuable Psychology.

"It is a phase which is not only important from the purely military viewpoint of naval operations, but from the viewpoint of psychological counteroffensive as well," he said.

"The Nazis think themselves pretty clever in the field of psychological warfare. Secrecy surrounding the fate of their submarines is a counterblow the American people can give them which may serve to shake some of their superconfidence.

"It is a game in which every American can and should participate. The navy will 'take care' of enemy submarines, and the people can help the navy and the country by keeping quiet about what they see or hear of the process or its results.

"The press and the radio have made a great, patriotic contribution by voluntarily disciplining themselves in the matter of reporting such incidents as may have come to their attention unofficially.

Japanese to Execute Filipinos Who Do Not Obey Army Orders

Washington, D. C., Jan. 23 (AP).—A reign of terror in Japanese occupied sections of the Philippines was indicated tonight by a war department communique which told of the establishment of death penalties for trivialities such as questioning the worth of the Japanese army's special "invasion currency."

Gen. Douglas MacArthur, in command of American and Filipino forces, reported to the department that the commanding Japanese general, Masaharu Homma, had signed a proclamation warning the civilian population that capital punishment would follow this and a list of other presumed offenses.

Must Obey Orders.

Failure to obey Japanese orders was one of them. Others were hiding food and clothing to prevent commandeering by the Japs, rebellion, spying, sabotage, looting, polluting drinking water, stealing arms, or "any other acts against the interests of Japanese forces."

The Japs came to the Philippines with currency already printed for forced circulation in the islands. Filipinos are compelled to accept it in exchange for goods, or services, or for the usual currency of the Philippine government, backed by gold and the credit of the United States.

It was made a capital offense, MacArthur said, to refuse to accept this bogus currency or to hinder "its free circulation by slanderous statements."

List of Offenses.

The war department's evening communique telling of the Japanese extension of the list of offenses punishable by death said: "The following is a list of the offenses catalogued in the proclamation [of Gen. Homma]:

"1. Rebellion against Japanese forces.

"2. Intentionally giving false directions to naval, land or air forces.

"3. Espionage: Collecting or giving out military information to American-Philippine forces or to the public.

"4. Giving false information or spreading rumors of military importance.

"5. Damaging or destroying roads, waterways, bridges, railways, signs, telegraph or telephone lines or equipment, mail facilities; and other disturbance of traffic or communications.

"6. Damaging, destroying or burning houses, warehouses, buildings, trains, automobiles, vehicles, ships, arms, ammunition, provisions, clothing, or any other military equipment.

"7. Damaging or destroying military signs and notices.

"8. Destroying or concealing clothing, provisions, fuel, vehicles, or live stock to avoid commandeering by Japanese military authorities.

"9. Stealing arms, ammunition, provisions, clothing or other supplies from the military authorities.

"10. Looting, robbery, murder, arson, sedition, or disturbing the peace.

"11. Pollution of drinking water.

Ban Slanderous Remarks.

"12. Attacking Japanese soldiers or civilian employés of the army or injuring them in the discharge of their duties.

"13. Counterfeiting or refusing to accept military notes or similar currency or hindering its free circulation by slanderous statements.

"14. Harboring or aiding the escape of any person violating martial law.

"15. Refusing or failing to obey orders issued by Japanese forces.

"16. Any other acts against the interests of the Japanese forces.

"17. Any suggestion or assistance in the commission of the acts listed."

In its morning communique, the war department told how MacArthur's forces on Bataan peninsula in Luzon Island had repulsed all Japanese attacks, which he said had been extremely heavy in the preceding 24 hours. This communique said the Japanese were showing no regard for their losses in the continuous attacks.

Still Cling to Stronghold.

Thus, after nearly seven weeks of fighting, American and Filipino troops still clung to their stronghold, holding an enemy army of 200,000 and its equipment that otherwise might be thrown into the crucial fighting in Malaya, or the attack upon the Dutch East Indies.

The army said, too, that MacArthur had received a message from Sir Archibald Wavell, the allied commander in chief in the far Pacific area, "formally congratulating him and his command for their magnificent defense of the Philippines."

The communique said that according to reports from Mindanao, the largest of the southern Philippine islands, the Japanese invaders there had organized some 10,000 Japanese residents of Davao into a local military force. Most of Davao's 30,000 inhabitants are Japanese.

BRITISH RULERS TAKE FLAT; CAN'T STAFF A PALACE

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Jan. 24 [Saturday].—Because wartime calls are taking a steady toll of servants from the Buckingham palace household, King George VI and Queen Elizabeth are moving into a specially built flat on the fourth floor of a new six story steel and concrete building now nearing completion in the west end of London.

At the flat, it was pointed out, they will need only a small staff when they entertain. They expect to move there in two weeks.

HERE ARE DAY'S DEVELOPMENTS ON WAR FRONTS

Latest developments on the world's fighting fronts:

Gen. MacArthur informed the United States war department that the Japanese have proclaimed 17 offenses for which death would be inflicted on civilians of occupied sections of the Philippines. The list of capital offenses included failure to obey Jap orders and refusal to accept the enemy's "invasion currency."

American and Filipino defenders on the Island of Luzon repulsed continuous Japanese attacks, according to the war department's communique. MacArthur said the attacks were extremely heavy.

Land at Three Places.

Australia announced Japanese landings at three places on that continent's protecting arc of outer island defenses — New Guinea, Kieta, principal city of Bougainville at the northern end of the Solomon island chain, and Rabaul on New Britain. The government manned the beaches of Australia with militia and sent an urgent plea to the United States and Britain for the immediate dispatch of war equipment, particularly aircraft.

The Netherlands East Indies command declared Dutch planes attacked a squadron of Japanese warships and "invasion transports" and crippled the armada with 12 direct hits on eight ships. The attack occurred between Celebes and Borneo, upper defenses of the Indies.

Blows Increase in Malaya.

From Singapore came word that Japanese troops threatened to turn the British left flank 60 miles northwest of the British base. The British said that elsewhere across the Malay peninsula they were holding their positions against what they called "increasingly heavy blows."

American and British flyers shot down "at least" 21 Japanese raiders from mass formations of Japanese raiders of more than 60 planes in the Rangoon area, according to dispatches from Burma's capital. The American airmen are volunteers who went to Burma to help defend the Burma road, "China's lifeline." The British acknowledged they were retreating before a mixed force of Thailand and Japanese invaders in the Burma panhandle.

The soviet command announced that Red armies advanced 65 miles on Russia's north-central front and that Red troops were within 120 miles of the Latvian border. The Russians said they recaptured 2,000 towns and killed 17,000 Germans.

From Africa came a British admission that axis forces had advanced 90 miles in a counterattack. The British said axis troops had recaptured Agedabia on the lower western side of the hump of Cirenaica.

MILITIA GUARDS COAST AGAINST ATTACK BY JAPS

Calls for Aid as Foe Lands on 3 Isles.

MELBOURNE, Australia, Jan. 24 [Saturday] (AP).—Japanese landings in at least three places on Australia's protecting arc of outer islands were announced today by the government. It appealed urgently to Prime Minister Churchill and President Roosevelt to furnish arms quickly so that Australian man power can "clear the seas and land of the Japanese menace."

Deputy Prime Minister Francis Forde said the Japanese had forced a landing at Rabaul, capital of the Australian mandated island of New Britain at 12:05 p. m. today.

11 Ships Enter Harbor.

Forde said he was advised by the commandant at Port Moresby, New Guinea that 11 Japanese merchantmen—presumably transports—had entered Rabaul harbor under the protection of three cruisers, a destroyer and an aircraft carrier lying off shore. He declared there was no indication that fighting now was going on at Rabaul, but said Australian forces probably were continuing resistance in other parts of the island.

No direct news had been received here from Rabaul since Thursday afternoon, when a radio flash said a Japanese fleet had been sighted 45 miles off shore. Rabaul previously had suffered two heavy air raids.

Already, there had come official word that the Japanese had landed at Kieta, the principal city of Bougainville, at the northern end of the Solomon Island chain, and on the large island of New Guinea itself, possibly at "a number" of points. No details were received as to the locations.

Troops Patrol Beaches.

While Australian militiamen guarded the beaches of the mainland against this ever-nearer threat, Forde, emphasizing the danger to Australia, called on London and Washington for adequate help.

Australia herself can supply the personnel, his messages pointed out, but she must have more and more arms.

A special plea was made for aircraft—for fighters and bombers and torpedo carrying planes — for use against Japanese warships and transports which are bringing the invaders to Australian territory.

Threat to Communications.

In the hour of their greatest danger, the Australians stressed not only the menace to themselves, but also to the entire allied communications system in the Japanese footholds so close to the mainland.

Rabaul on New Britain is 800 miles northeast of the mainland; extreme southern New Guinea is within 100 miles of northern Australia; occupation of the Solomons will put the enemy well athwart the path of help from the United States.

Strong Japanese bases in New Guinea and the Bismarck archipelago could in some circumstances command the Torres strait between New Guinea and Australia proper and force a 3,000 mile detour of allied shipping south of the Australian mainland.

Broadcasts to Nation.

In a broadcast Forde, the deputy prime minister, told the people of Australia:

"For the first time in history Australian territory has been attacked; for the first time in history a foreign invader is trying to get a footing on Australian territorial soil.

"We shall give battle to the best of our ability wherever we fight.

"At this moment, Japan's attacking bases are within bombing reach of Australia [proper].

"She has achieved air strength powerful enough to devastate our cities and industrial centers unless opposed in the battle areas with adequate weapons, machines, and tools."

Nevertheless Forde pledged that with allied help "we will clear the seas and land of the Japanese menace."

U. S. AND BRITISH FLYERS BAG 21 JAPS IN BURMA

Rout 60 Planes as Land Forces Fall Back.

RANGOON, Burma, Jan. 23 (AP).—American and British fighter pilots, veterans all, knocked down 21 of 60 Japanese raiders over the Rangoon area today, putting a crimp in Japanese aspirations to strike a crippling blow from the rear in support of their operations in the south Burma panhandle.

The surviving raiders fled, and it was believed here that their utter rout would strongly influence the enemy offensive directed at present against the picturesque port of Moulmein, but which is intended ultimately to gain this terminus of the Burma road. The two cities lie opposite each other across the gulf of Martaban.

Ground Troops Fall Back.

This aerial success against the greatest odds yet encountered in Burma occurred while British troops in the panhandle were falling back from the mountains to within 26 miles of Moulmein before a large mixed force of Japanese and Thailand soldiers. It was believed the invaders would try to flank the strongest British points east of Moulmein and then swing northwest to the Salween river above the city.

There were two main air battles over Rangoon. In the first, seven Japanese planes were downed; in the second, 14 crashed.

One American pilot, back in action again after recovering from a wound sustained in an air battle Jan. 4, failed to return from today's operation and one RAF pilot was lost. The Briton was the first to challenge the raiders and was seen single handedly attacking 24 enemy craft.

American Becomes Ace in Day.

The day's ace was a former navy flier, Pete [last name withheld], once with the United States aircraft carrier Ranger, whose home is Pensacola, Fla. He sent three enemy craft crashing to earth from the first wave of attackers, refuelled, took off again, and shot down two in the second wave.

Then there was Jack, a member of the American Volunteer Group, from Scarsdale, N. Y., who raised his score to date to eight by setting fire to one Japanese plane and shooting the wing off another.

"What your Yanks and our boys are doing today beats almost anything in the history of the battle of Britain," a veteran RAF officer commented. "Give them better and better planes and the Japs will get sicker and sicker of this war."

The AVG's revised score now is 97 confirmed victories and numerous probables, against three Americans dead and two missing.

Japs Claim Seven Planes.

TOKIO, Jan. 23 [Official Broadcast Recorded by Associated Press].—The Domei news agency reporting from "an undisclosed Japanese base," said tonight that 7 out of 10 planes were shot down by Japanese pilots in dogfights today. It said three were American made P-40s, one a Brewster Buffalo, and two British Spitfires.

Basel Gripped by Coldest Wave of Century; 11° Below

BERNE, Switzerland, Jan. 23 (AP).—The lowest temperature in 100 years—11.2 degrees below zero Fahrenheit—was recorded today at Basel as all of continental Europe continued in the grip of an intense cold wave. From Budapest came reports that Hungary was suffering from 31 below zero cold, accompanied by violent snowstorms.

ADMIRAL LAUDS M'ARTHUR, THEN DEFENDS FLEET

Gen. Douglas MacArthur's fight against the Japanese in the Philippines was described as "grand and gallant" last night by Rear Adm. Clark Howell Woodward, U. S. N., retired, in an address in the Town Hall series on the Northwestern university campus.

The admiral devoted most of his talk to a discussion of sea power, and predicted that altho the war would be long, the United States and British fleets would lead the way to victory. In the long run, he said, Japan cannot hope to cope with American sea power. By June, he added, we will be "building two ships of all types every day."

Adm. Woodward made the flat statement at one point that an "air bomb cannot sink a heavy battleship." Some one in the audience called out that a Japanese air bomb had sunk the U. S. S. Arizona at Pearl Harbor. Adm. Woodward replied that the bomb had gone down the funnel and it "was one shot in a million." He added that bombs might sink light battleships or cruisers, but his point was in reference, he said, to heavy battleships. All ships are vulnerable, he said, to airplane torpedo attacks.

JAPAN REPORTS U. S. PRISONERS ARRIVE IN CHINA

SHANGHAI, Jan. 23 [Official Japanese Broadcast Recorded by Associated Press]—About 1,200 American war prisoners from Wake Island arrived here today, the Domei news agency reported. Their prison ship, escorted here by a warship, reached Yokohama from Wake Jan. 18, and some of them were debarked there.

The others, including Commander W. S. Cunningham, will be landed here tomorrow for internment.

10 Jailed for High Treason in South Africa Police Quiz

CAPETOWN, Union of South Africa, Jan. 23 (AP).—Ten persons arrested today in Pretoria were charged with high treason and subversive propaganda. These arrests and seizure of a number of policemen in Johannesburg, Jan. 20, were said to be sequels to the detention of the mysterious Robey Leibrand, former policeman boxing champion. He was accused of heading a subversive organization.

LINES? 'AUSSIES' FIND THEM VERY VAGUE IN JUNGLE

Patrol Spends 6 Out of 8 Nights Amid Japs.

BY SERGT. IAN FITCHETT.

[Official correspondent with the Australian imperial force.]

WITH THE AIF ON THE MALAYAN FRONT, Jan. 23 [Australian Associated Press to Associated Press].—While the main body of the Australian imperial force has been in action against the Japanese in fairly solid groups, some of their comrades, on patrol, have plunged thru steaming, swampy jungle many miles behind the enemy lines to carry out their assignments.

Today I met a lieutenant who, with his platoon, has spent only two nights on this side of the enemy lines since the AIF went into action eight days ago.

He had just come back after two days in the jungle, seeking to find a way out, with a recalcitrant compass that acted up because of the proximity of an iron mine.

He said his party had been cut off by the Japanese in an encounter, with the Japanese sniping at them, "but their aim was lousy."

All They Could See Were Japs.

"As I led the men into the jungle I realized that the enemy had got past us in larger numbers and had forced troops behind to withdraw," he said. "We forced our way thru the jungle on the road a good way behind, but all we could see were Japs pouring on. I decided the road was impassable so I headed thru the jungle on a compass."

This is his story of the jungle adventure:

"We got into sort of cactus swamps and my compass started to play up owing to the proximity of a small iron mine. Darkness caught us, so we halted but we got no sleep all night as the mosquitoes and swamp lice were terrible.

Chinese Help Them Out.

"At dawn I got the swing of the compass toward the mine and managed to set a course allowing for the swing. We hacked away all day thru the jungle and swamps—my men are all good bushmen—and kept going tho cut to pieces by thorns and cactus. On we went all day and tho I tried to keep the general direction the compass played up badly.

"Toward dusk I realized a road was near as I heard transport and heavy almost continuous bombing. That night passed again without sleep. The men were getting what rest they could on palm leaves laid on watery ground.

"The next morning we found a Chinese hut. They treated us marvelously and gave us biscuits and tea. Our scanty rations had long since run out.

"They put us on our track and we reached our main lines. The men are sore and cut up but after a good sleep they'll be on the job again."

Blow Up Railway Bridge.

The same party prior to this adventure had only just returned from blowing up a railway bridge well behind the enemy lines in another sector. The Japs got round them without their being able to warn another party some miles back, so they were forced to blow a bridge behind them and a runner sent to tell them never got thru. A patrol, sent after a worrying wait, ascertained this, and the party set out on a trip home thru many miles of enemy territory.

It took them four days to get in and they brought back information of the location of enemy guns which resulted in their immediate destruction.

Japanese Infiltration Threatens British Coastal Flank in Malaya

SINGAPORE, Jan. 23 (AP).—Japanese troops threatened tonight to turn the British left flank at Batu Pahat, 60 miles northwest of Singapore, but elsewhere across the peninsula the outnumbered imperials were reported holding on doggedly against increasingly heavy blows.

The British command acknowledged evidence of Japanese penetration in the Batu Pahat sector, the west coastal anchor of a line stretching across Johore state thru Chaah in the center to Mersing on the east coast.

These infiltrations coincided with reënforced Japanese frontal assaults in an effort to force the withdrawal of defense units at Bukit Payong, a hill area some nine miles north of Batu Pahat.

Admit Situation Is Dangerous.

Maj. Gen. Gordon Bennett, Australian army commander, said the situation was "very confused" and more dangerous than a few days ago.

Heavy fighting continued at Bukit Payong and also around the central Chaah sector, 70 miles north of Singapore and 25 miles north of Kluang, important railway and road junction.

On the east coast at Mersing the British said their artillery was effectively harassing the Japanese who had pushed down from Endau. Mersing is approximately 65 miles north of here, and the thick jungle growth makes any Japanese flanking operations there almost impossible.

Shoot Down Some Raiders.

Japanese planes sprayed explosives all along this 80 mile line and also attacked Singapore this morning, following up yesterday's raid which killed 58 civilians and injured 170.

British fighters destroyed one Japanese bomber and probably another today, the communique said, whereas six or eight of the 54 raiders were claimed yesterday.

CHINESE TROOPS RAID JAP NAVAL BASE OFF COREA

New York, Jan. 23 (AP).—The British radio relayed today a report that Chinese guerrillas had crossed the Yellow sea and stormed Japanese naval headquarters on Yoko Island off the coast of Corea.

The report seems to have come from Central News, an agency of the Chinese government, because the British Broadcasting company announcer added: "The China Central News agency reports that more than 300 Japanese were killed."

Yoko is not shown on available maps here, but there is a Ryuko on the Corean island-studded coast about 250 miles across the Yellow sea northeast of Shantung peninsula. Ryuko is directly east of Port Arthur across the Corea bay.

MacSwiney was imprisoned on Spoke Island but escaped by motor boat past a British warship. He was a brother of Terence MacSwiney, lord mayor of Cork, who died on a hunger strike in Brixton prison in 1920.

TELL HOW RAILS MOVED 600,000 IN ARMED FORCES

Prodigious Feat Due to Careful Planning.

Rail Time Change

Railroads have taken no official action to conform with the nation-wide advance of one hour in standard time on Feb. 9, but executives said last night they assumed that the roads would turn their clocks ahead one hour along with other industries, leaving schedules nominally unchanged.

Revelation in Washington, D. C., that a third of America's armed forces, about 600,000 officers and men, had been moved to new positions in the seven weeks after Pearl Harbor brought a second revelation yesterday. Such a movement on American railroads, it was disclosed, constituted one of the greatest military transport actions in the nation's history.

The railroads, with scarcely a moment's notice, shifted from peace to wartime operation, moving the 600,000 extra passengers and their equipment long distances at high speed. They accomplished this with scarcely any inconvenience to the traveling public.

Here's One Example.

Details of the gigantic operation cannot be told, but here is an example:

A typical order to a railroad was one for 1,786 freight cars, 200 sleeping cars, and 89 baggage cars. That was only one road. There are 137 railroads listed as class 1 in the country.

Railroad circles said yesterday that the full story of this Herculean enterprise, which was largely directed from Chicago, would show it to have been the result of two principal factors:

1. Preparedness by the railroads to meet any war emergency.

2. The close coöperation between the roads and the military.

Most of Movement Westward.

It is no secret that most of the movement was westward. The Western Military bureau, with headquarters here, is in charge of all troop movements west of the line from Chicago to New Orleans. Hugh W. Siddall, veteran Chicago passenger executive, is chairman of the bureau.

In its offices railroad men and army officers worked in three shifts day and night routing the special trains. These were run between regular scheduled passenger trips to avoid disruption of civilian service. Many of the trains were mixed, including passenger, freight, and baggage cars, so that men and materials could be kept together.

The trains moved at the remarkable average speeds of 40 to 50 miles an hour.

There was one fortuitous circumstance that allowed the railroads to undertake their task with especial speed. There were many Pullmans, tourist cars, and coaches on hand at the various camps, or on their way there, because the roads had expected to move about a million men to their homes for the Christmas and New Year holidays.

Taken to Military Destinations.

Instead of going home, the troops boarded these trains and were taken to military destinations.

If each of the 600,000 troops traveled 1,000 miles, a conservative estimate, for most of them probably traveled between 1,500 and 2,000 miles, there was added 600 million passenger miles to the railroads' normal burden.

The roads did a business of 23,752,359,182 passenger miles in 1940, the last year tabulated, which was the highest for 10 years preceding. This is an average of more than 65 million passenger miles a day. So the movement of troops was the equivalent of nearly 10 days business by all the passenger trains in the United States.

Again, if figured at the average passenger coach rate for civilians of 2 cents a mile, it would have cost 12 million dollars to move 600,000 individuals an average of 1,000 miles. But the military forces get a rate of 1¼ cents a mile, so it cost at least 7½ million dollars to move these men.

CANADA CABINET BACKS DRAFT FOR OVERSEAS DUTY

Ministers to Campaign for Public's O.K.

OTTAWA, Ont., Jan. 23 (AP).—Canadian cabinet ministers announced tonight they would go all-out to get the government released from its anti-conscription pledge at a forthcoming plebiscite.

One by one they made known their position following the government announcement yesterday that an election would be held soon on the bitterly debated question of whether the dominion would conscript men for overseas service.

A number of ministers said they would campaign from the platform for an affirmative answer when Canadians have their say on the explosive issue for the first time since 1917. The date of the plebiscite is yet to be fixed.

"Must Have Authority."

"We must have authority to use any compulsion necessary," said one minister.

Another commented that it was "most important to the government and to Canada that we get an affirmative reply."

A third said that Liberal members from Quebec had promised to appeal to meetings of their constituents for release from past commitments in the methods of raising men for the armed services.

Asked what would be the government's attitude in event it failed to obtain its release, a minister said: "Why, we just wouldn't go ahead with conscription for overseas."

Commons to Get Question.

He added that he did not think the government would consider defeat of the plebiscite as a vote of lack of confidence.

Prime Minister W. L. Mackenzie King is expected to announce in a speech to commons Monday the exact wording of the question to be submitted to the electorate.

Final decision has not been reached as to whether a new voters' list will be required. State Secretary Norman McLarty said he thought the list used in the 1940 election would be proper. He also made clear that soldiers overseas would take part in the plebiscite.

21 PAN-AMERICAN NATIONS AGREE ON AXIS BREAKS

Action 'Recommended' in Compromise Plan.

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil, Jan. 23 (AP).—A compromise resolution recommending but not requiring rupture of relations with Japan, Germany, and Italy was approved unanimously late today by the full 21-nation political committee of the Pan-American conference.

The change, representing a major concession to Argentina and Chile, dashed United States hopes that all the Americas would sever axis ties forthwith.

Sumner Welles, United States undersecretary of state, frankly acknowledged that the United States would have preferred a more definite and stronger action, but voted for the greatly modified resolution.

"In our concept," Welles said, "the nations which carried war to the United States also carried it to the other Americas. This constitutes danger for all of us. Our hope is that we realize this danger and act accordingly."

The softened language resulted from the prolonged objections of Argentina, followed by Chile, to the original resolution for an outright severance of diplomatic ties with the axis powers and to an earlier compromise providing for congressional approval of a break.

Approve Four Point Declarations.

As finally approved at the oratory laden open session of the political committee shortly after dusk tonight, the four part resolution read:

"ARTICLE 1. The American republics reaffirm their declaration to consider any act of aggression by an extra-continental state against one of them as an act of aggression against all, by being an immediate threat to the liberty and independence of America.

"ARTICLE 2. The American representatives reaffirm their complete solidarity and determination to cooperate all together for reciprocal protection until the effects of the present aggression on the continent have disappeared.

"ARTICLE 3. The American republics, following the procedure established by their own laws and within the position and circumstances of each country in the present international conflict, recommend rupture of their diplomatic relations with Japan, Germany, and Italy, inasmuch as the first of these states attacked and the other two declared war on an American country.

"ARTICLE 4. The American republics declare finally that before re-establishing relations to which the previous paragraph refers they will consult among themselves so that their decision may have a solid character."

Final Adoption a Formality.

Only the formality of approval by the full conference is required to complete the action.

Actually, of the 21 American republics, all already are at war against the axis or have severed relations with the axis powers except Argentina, Brazil, Chile, Bolivia, Ecuador, Paraguay, Peru, and Uruguay.

Foreign Minister Alberto Guani said Uruguay probably would sever axis relations tomorrow, and authorized sources predicted Brazil, Bolivia, Paraguay, and Peru would do likewise within a few days. This would leave only Argentina, Chile, and Ecuador on the fence. Buenos Aires reports said Argentina's decision might be deferred until after congressional elections in March.

Foreign Minister Enrique Ruiz Guinazu of Argentina declared the compromise formula "consecrated the right of each country to evaluate its own opinions," but that "the unity of the Americas is a fact."

Foreign Minister Juan Buatista Rosetti of Chile said his country was "disposed to fight for the American peoples in life, and in death if necessary."

TYPHOON OF WAR RAGES AGAINST 3 SOUTH SEA ISLES

Japs Strike Near U. S. Routes in Pacific.

Japan's invasion of New Guinea, New Britain, and the Solomon islands yesterday unfurled the rising sun flag over a group of South Sea Islands lying athwart United States routes to the Pacific war zone and brought the war alarmingly near Australia.

The New Britain landing was at Rabaul, capital of the Australian mandated island, while in the Solomon islands the invasion occurred at Kieta, principal city of Bougainville.

Just where the Japanese troops landed on New Guinea was not told in early dispatches, but there was a possibility some had been put ashore near Madang, a port of northeastern New Guinea, which has been bombed. If such is true, it puts the Japanese 450 air line miles from the nearest Australian territory, Cape York, and about 1,200 air line miles from Darwin, northern Australian port where the Australians have built a naval base.

Southern New Guinea is just 100 miles across the Torres Strait from Cape York, northernmost tip of Australia, but the Japanese apparently have not landed on southern New Guinea.

War Hits Picturesque Isles.

The Japanese moves brought modern war to some lesser known islands of the picturesque South sea group.

New Britain is in the Bismarck Islands. They were part of the German protectorate of New Guinea, which was established in 1884. Shortly after the World war began in 1914 they were occupied by Australia and at the end of the war were assigned to Australia, together with part of New Guinea, under a league of nations mandate which became effective Dec. 17, 1920.

The total population of Australia's mandated territory of New Guinea is 627,283 natives and 4,608 whites.

Military Training Prohibited.

The Bismarck Islands mandate, like the Japanese mandate for the Caroline Islands, prohibited military training of the natives, except for police purposes, and banned establishment of military or naval bases or fortifications.

The entire island of New Guinea is divided between the British and Dutch. The western half is governed by the Netherlands government in exile in London.

New Britain Island is about 50 miles wide and 300 miles long. Its population is 93,000. The chief product is copra [dried coconut]. Tropical fruits grow abundantly.

The chief imports of New Britain have been foodstuffs, beer, coal, paints, boats, and soap, all from Australia. However, New Britain also has been a customer of the United States, obtaining mining machinery, vehicles, tobacco, and miscellaneous machinery.

Rabaul has a good harbor and most of the white population of New Britain was settled in or near Rabaul.

New Ireland Island, which has had air raids, is second in size to New Britain in the Bismarck group and is separated from the larger island by St. George's channel.

The total area of the Solomon Islands is about 16,950 square miles. They lie southeast of the Bismarck archipelago. The main part of the island chain is made up of the British Solomon Islands. The northwestern end, however, formerly was German and has been administered by Australia under mandate.

70 SURVIVORS OF TWO TORPEDOED VESSELS REACH CANADIAN PORT

AN EAST COAST CANADIAN PORT, Jan. 23 (AP).—Survivors of a British freighter torpedoed in the western Atlantic landed here tonight and reported 42 saved out of a crew of 45. They were adrift seven hours.

Two torpedoes fired in early morning darkness sank the vessel and killed three men in her hold. Three others were injured seriously enough to be taken to a hospital when they reached port.

The recent torpedoing of a Norwegian freighter on the Atlantic also was disclosed when 28 survivors arrived here in a fishing schooner. The seamen said a torpedo split their ship in two and they barely had time to get into the boats before the vessel went to the bottom. The weather was fine, they said, and they did not suffer much from exposure before they were rescued.

HEAR CHURCHILL IGNORES WARNING ON POLICY VOTE

Cabinet Meets on SOS from West Pacific.

BY LARRY RUE.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Jan. 24 [Saturday].—Cabinet ministers and service advisers met last night to consider developments in the western Pacific, particularly what should be done regarding the SOS cabled from Australia and New Zealand, both to Prime Minister Winston Churchill and President Roosevelt. However, there are no indications yet that any decisions have been taken, the only information available being that the cabinet ministers "will keep in touch with developments" thruout the week-end.

Churchill himself, it was reported, will deal with this question when he explains to the house of commons the conclusions reached in Washington, D. C., for better coördination of the war effort of all the imperial and allied countries.

Expect Demand for Vote.

Evidence continues to accumulate to support the belief that Churchill will go thru with a demand for a vote of confidence in the forthcoming three-day debate on the war situation. But some commentators are even more dubious than heretofore on the question of whether he will make changes in the cabinet. Several political writers take the view that he may do so "later on." Churchill, it is suggested, regards the setbacks in the western Pacific as only temporary and, according to Maurice Webb, Daily Herald political correspondent, he hopes that favorable developments in the near future will bring news which will justify the government's conduct of the war in that area.

Churchill has been warned by party leaders that some members within the Conservative bloc could not support a vote of confidence, it was reported.

This morning's Daily Mail, taking for granted that cabinet changes are bound to come, suggests that, while it is "inevitable" that Churchill lost contact with public opinion in this country during his visit to Washington, he is a "good democrat, with a real respect for public opinion."

Most of the Saturday morning dailies show resentment at the criticisms of the British war leaders, particularly of First Lord of the Admiralty A. V. Alexander, and the British responsibility for developments in the western Pacific by J. A. Beasley and Dr. H. V. Evatt, Australian ministers of supply and external affairs.

Given Little Attention.

Most papers here publish only brief extracts from these statements, with the exception of the Daily Mail, which, incidentally, mentions that the texts were handed out to the British press by the Australian authorities in London.

Minister of Supply Lord Beaverbrook's Daily Express says: "In heat it has been said that Britain keeps too much at home to defend herself. That is not true. Britain's attempts to reënforce the western Pacific situation have been limited only by the amount of shipping available."

The Daily Telegraph, similarly stressing that tonnage is the limiting factor, says that the Evatt-Beasley statement "strangely misrepresents the situation." It assures Australia that the threat to the commonwealth is "not lightly regarded either in London or Washington."

"U. S. Will Not Fail."

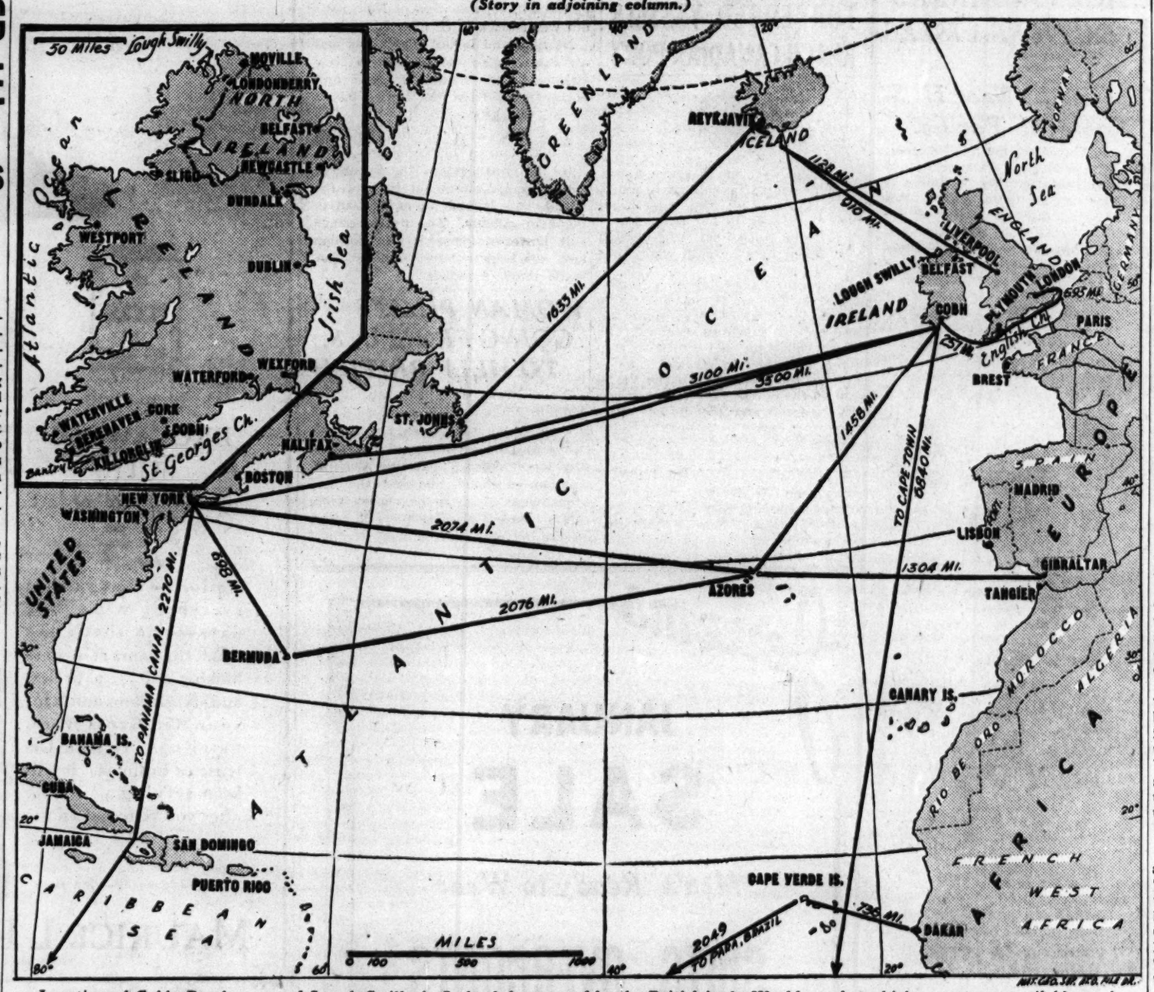
The Daily Mirror, informing its readers that Australia "is angry with Britain," finds consolation from the fact that "the people of Australia are in full accord, both in anger and determination, that no government shall stand in the way of drastic measures to defeat the common enemy."

Lord Kemsley's Daily Sketch seems to regard the entire Pacific setup as America's problem. Under the heading, "United States Will Not Fail," it says:

"Let one thing be abundantly clear. It is that America does not underestimate the gravity of the crisis or the part she must play in dealing with it. Our main affair is on this side of the world; hers is on that. Between the two of us we shall repel all assaults and carry the war back into the enemy's country."

Irish Bases and Their Place in the Strategy of Modern War

(Story in adjoining column.)



Location of Cobh, Berehaven, and Lough Swilly in Ireland, bases used by the British in the World war, but which are not now available to the British in their defense of sea lanes. Distances between American, Irish, British, African, and European ports are given. Inset map is large scale map of Ireland. These maps will be helpful in following the address by Col. Robert R. McCormick tonight on W-G-N starting at 8 p. m.

COL. M'CORMICK TO TELL VALUE OF IRISH BASES

Speaks Tonight on W-G-N Theater of Air.

The potential value of Irish naval bases in the present war will be discussed tonight by Col. Robert R. McCormick, editor and publisher of THE TRIBUNE, on the Chicago Theater of the Air over W-G-N, W59C, and the Mutual Broadcasting system.

Col. McCormick will tell how the Chamberlain government in 1938 gave up three Irish ports over the protest of Winston Churchill, and how their lack imperiled and still imperils the British cause.

Feature Romberg's "New Moon."

The musical part of the program will feature Sigmund Romberg's operetta, "The New Moon." Before the broadcast, 600 key workers in the Chicago Police and Fire Thrill show will see a color movie of the 1941 show presented by the police and fire departments and the park district in coöperation with THE TRIBUNE.

Doors of the W-G-N audience studio will open at 6:45 p. m. so guests may be seated in time for the movie showing at 7 p. m. The picture, taken under the supervision of Lieut. Harry Wolff of the fire department drill school, shows thrilling highlights of the 1941 show which attracted more than 85,000 spectators.

Opera Star to Sing.

The operetta broadcast will follow at 8 o'clock. Marion Claire and Thomas Thomas, baritone, will sing the leading rôles. Several of Romberg's most popular melodies, "Lover Come Back to Me," "Softly as in a Morning Sunrise," and the smashing "Stout Hearted Men," are included in this work.

Leading dramatic parts will be taken by Betty Lou Gerson and Les Tremayne.

The music will be provided by the W-G-N Symphony orchestra.

British Finally Lift Radio Ban on Russia's Anthem

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Nazis Report Ace with 47 Aerial Victories Is Killed

REPORT WINDSOR MET CHURCHILL ON FLORIDA TRIP

Local Residents Tell of Secret Visit.

Miami, Fla., Jan. 23 [Special].—Winston Churchill, British prime minister, and the Duke of Windsor, the former King Edward VIII., of Great Britain, are reported to have met at a secret rendezvous in Florida early this month.

The meeting is said to have occurred some time between Jan. 2 and Jan. 9 at the palatial home of Edward Stettinius Jr., lend-lease administrator, and chairman of the United States Steel corporation, at Pompano, 35 miles north of Miami.

Visit Made Secretly.

Residents of Pompano said the duke and the prime minister, who was his stanchest defender in the abdication crisis in 1936, were together at least 18 hours.

The duke arrived secretly and departed as secretly. It was reported that he came by American naval plane from Nassau, the Bahamas, where he is governor general, and departed the same way.

The same secrecy which shrouded the ex-king's visit to Churchill in the United States, also shielded Churchill's brief sojourn in southern Florida, altho Churchill's presence was more commonly known locally than his guest's.

Stay at Stettinius Home.

The prime minister's visit to these parts was in the nature of a vacation, and was so informally designated in a White House statement on Jan. 17, immediately following his safe return to England from war conferences in the United States and Canada. Churchill has been on this side of the Atlantic since Dec. 22. After conferences with President Roosevelt, he journeyed to Canada, addressed the Canadian parliament Dec. 30, returned to Washington Jan. 1, and left for Florida.

Churchill and his party—the number is not known—arrived in three special Pullman cars at Pompano on Jan. 2, and went directly to the Stettinius home, which sits on a cliff in semi-tropical setting, and faces the ocean shore. Stettinius was not present.

Secret service agents and federal bureau of investigation aids lurked everywhere. They hid in the palm shrubbery, and they kept curious villagers at a distance from the house on the land side, and entirely off the beach on the ocean side. Off shore, three warships idled, and overhead naval planes—usually one at a time—droned constantly.

These circumstances, combined with the inevitable grapevine gossip, soon led to the disclosure locally, that a distinguished visitor was in the neighborhood. Nevertheless, the secret was well protected elsewhere.

Tries Hand at Fishing.

Churchill went fishing twice and made what was described as one "good catch." It was reported that the equivalent of a fish fry was held that night in the Stettinius home. Whether the duke accompanied him on the fishing expeditions could not be learned.

The prime minister left Pompano Jan. 9. His special Pullmans were hooked onto a regular north bound train of the Florida East Coast railroad at West Palm Beach.

He arived north without incident, altho the regular train two hours ahead of his train was derailed five miles north of St. Augustine, Fla. No one was injured.

Eight hours later a regular southbound train from New York was derailed 10 miles south of St. Augustine. Sixteen were hurt. Railroad officials in Jacksonville, Fla. later attributed both wrecks to the expansion and contraction of rails as a result of sudden changes in temperature.

Palm Beach, Fla., Jan. 23 [Special].—Lord and Lady Halifax, who have been at Hobe Sound, were luncheon guests today of former Ambassador Joseph P. Kennedy and Mrs. Kennedy at their residence, leaving immediately afterward for Washington.

EVENTS THIS MONTH RECALL ABDICATION STAND BY CHURCHILL

The announcement in London three days ago of the intended retirement of the archbishop of Canterbury came just four days after the return to England of Winston Churchill, British prime minister, who is reported to have been visited by the duke of Windsor during his recent visit to Florida. It was recalled that Churchill was the duke's champion defender in the latter's abdication fight with the archbishop in 1936.

The archbishop probably more than any other individual forced the duke's abdication as King Edward VIII. The issue was the latter's then contemplated marriage to the American born Wallis Simpson, now the duchess of Windsor. The archbishop attacked the intended marriage as a scandal which would have cheapened the royal crown.

Churchill, leveling his attacks mainly at Stanley Baldwin, who was then prime minister and the official leader of the fight for the abdication, pleaded for "time and tolerance," and against an abdication "hastily extorted." He has been considered a close friend of the duke.

SOLE DUTCH SUB SURVIVOR TELLS OF 35 HOUR SWIM

Mine Victim Sees Officers Drown One by One.

[When the Netherlands East Indies went to war with Japan a Dutch submarine was poking thru the Gulf of Siam, keeping periscope watch on four Japanese troop transports heading for the British Malaya shore. When word was received that the war was on the submarine fired its torpedoes. The four Japanese ships went down with about 4,000 soldiers. Days later the submarine struck a mine. There was one survivor. The following is the story of his escape, issued thru Aneta, official Netherlands news agency.]

BY QUARTERMASTER C. DE WOLF.

BATAVIA, Netherlands East Indies, Jan. 23 [Aneta to Associated Press.]—It's still hard to believe that I survived the submarine disaster in which all my mates lost their lives. The night it happened we were cruising on the surface to investigate a light on the horizon. There were six of us in the conning tower, our captain, myself, and four other officers.

Suddenly a blast seemed to lift the sub out of the water and all six of us were hurled into the water. Stunned by the explosion, but fortunately uninjured, I began to swim around looking for the others. The captain had vanished, but the other four officers were still with me and able to swim. We started swimming according to directions we had received from our captain in case of emergency.

Waters Infested with Sharks.

All of us were driven on by the frightening knowledge that all the dark water around us was infested by sharks. We rid ourselves of clothes. After 12 hours three of the men had to give up exhausted and sank below the waves. The other officer and I could give them no assistance because we ourselves were desperately tired. A few hours later he, too, was swallowed up by the sea.

I had now been in the water 18 hours and no land was in sight. My arms ached and I was desperately drowsy, but somehow—one can't explain such things—I kept going. I swam thruout the night and the next day. Apparently the sharks were busy elsewhere because I saw none.

Finally I saw land. As I got close to the shore—my strength was practically gone—a wave threw me onto the rocky beach, where a rock cut me badly in the back. I had been in the water 35 hours as far as I could figure.

Lies on Beach for Hours.

For several hours I must have lain half conscious, but eventually I was able to stumble forward. After several hours of this painful walking I sighted a number of natives.

The natives gave me an old shirt to wear and led me to a native proah [canoe]. The owner of this fragile craft took me to a small native settlement, but the end of my trouble was still far away.

After getting something to eat I felt stronger and asked some natives to take me to a European settlement. They consented and we started afoot. I had no shoes and soon my feet began to bleed so badly that it was almost impossible to go on. The soles of my feet were torn to pieces and the pain was so frightful I had to sit down every few steps.

Finds "Aussie" Guarding Him.

We finally reached a small clearing in the jungle where I lay down for about half an hour. I apparently dozed off because when I struggled to my feet I was astonished to see that my guides made no effort to get up with me. They sat motionless with expressionless faces. One of the fellows without a word jerked his thumb over his shoulder and following the indicated direction I was startled to see the gleaming barrel of a gun and its bayonet pointing straight at me from out of the jungle wall.

Fortunately the man holding the gun revealed himself to be an Australian. Semiconscious, I was transported from there to a Singapore hospital. After two weeks of skilled medical care I recovered sufficiently to return to my base in the Netherlands Indies.

I'm very pleased to be able to join up again and have another crack at the yellow scum.

Knits for Knitters

Corp. Pierre Mahoney knitting sweater for civilians in return for garments civilians have sent him.

Camp Wheeler, Ga., Jan. 23 (AP).—Some citizen in the frosty north is going to be grateful to Corp. Pierre Mahoney and his busy knitting needles. He is making a sweater—"A modest contribution to civilian morale."

Mahoney got the idea during Christmas when friends in his home town of Maspeth, N. Y., sent him six mufflers, eight pairs of socks and five sweaters.

"They need them 20 degrees worse than I do," he said. Now a woolen sweater is almost finished.

"Maybe it will keep some civilian warm," he explains.

PROBE KNUDSEN COMMISSION AS LIEUT. GENERAL

Washington, D. C., Jan. 23 (AP).—An inquiry into the appointment of William S. Knudsen, former co-director of the Office of Production Management, to be a lieutenant general in the army, was ordered today by the senate military affairs committee.

Chairman A. B. Chandler [D., Ky.] said a subcommittee had called Robert P. Patterson, assistant secretary of war, and Donald M. Nelson, head of the new War Production board, for testimony tomorrow. When he appointed Nelson head of the war production program, President Roosevelt nominated Knudsen to be a lieutenant general.

Chairman Robert R. Reynolds [D., N. C.] of the full committee said a number of telegrams had been received protesting that the nomination of a civilian for the second highest military rank would have an adverse effect on army morale.

Col. Davison Is Appointed Asst. Chief of Air Personnel

Washington, D. C., Jan. 23 (AP).—Col. F. Trubee Davison, assistant secretary of war for air in the Coolidge administration, was designated today assistant chief of the army's air staff in charge of military and civilian personnel of the army air forces. Col. Davison succeeds Brig. Gen. Ralph P. Cousins, who has been given command of the west coast air corps training center. Col. Davison, has been on active duty since last summer as deputy chief of the air force combat command staff.

DUTCH BOMBERS HIT 8 JAP SHIPS; STEM INVASIONS

4 Transports Damaged in Macassar Strait.

BATAVIA, Netherlands East Indies, Jan. 23 (AP).—Heavy bombers and dive-bombing fighters of the Dutch East Indies air force caught a squadron of Japanese warships and a train of invasion transports in the strait of Macassar today and left them crippled with 12 direct hits on eight ships.

Making superb use of their American-built aircraft in the narrow waters which the Japanese invaders of the Dutch East Indies now are endeavoring to penetrate, the Dutch flying fleet came back to their base without a single casualty of their own. This was their score, announced in a special communique:

One large warship, perhaps a battleship, directly hit by 660 pound bombs.

One heavy cruiser, one light cruiser and one large transport struck by bombs of the same caliber.

A destroyer, two large transports and one smaller ship, dive-bombed by fighters and hit with 175 pound bombs.

Between Invaded Islands.

The strait in which the attack was delivered lies between the islands of Borneo and Celebes, upper defenses of the Indies and both of them invaded in part by Japanese forces.

Already the enemy is in possession of the oil island of Tarakan off the northeast coast of Borneo and the Minahassa peninsula, narrow upper arm of Celebes. The ships which were bombed were obviously steaming southward from those bases for further landings to the south.

It was in timely anticipation of just such a move that the Dutch yesterday put the torch to the oil wells and refineries of Balik Papan, Borneo east coast port more than 300 miles south of Tarakan.

Secret Airports Utilized.

Thus today's aerial foray [possibly carried out from secret inland airports which the Dutch are reputed to have established in the jungles of Borneo] was important in at least delaying or weakening further landing attempts..

On the debit side of the ledger the Netherlands East Indies command today reported two new raids on Belawan Deli, the port for Medan, Sumatra, by Japanese bombers which dropped many bombs, damaging some sheds and ships and wounding 16 persons. An Aneta agency correspondent in Medan reported most casualties resulted from a near miss on an air raid shelter trench.

Sabang, on We island five miles off the northern tip of Sumatra, was bombed again, but two ships which were the targets were unhit. The airport at Palembang, south Sumatra, was raided by 27 Japanese fighters and two persons were wounded.

Japs Use Conquered Bases.

Use of fighters here indicated they were based on conquered Malayan bases above Singapore.

The airdrome of Gorontalo, probably on the part of Minahassa peninsula not occupied by the Japanese, was attacked with incendiary bombs.

Dutch air raids yesterday on the Japanese forces occupying Kuching, capital of Sarawak, on the west side of Borneo, fired storage yards at the river mouth.

ARMY BOMBER, FORCED DOWN BY SNOWSTORM, TAKES OFF FROM ROAD

Somerset, Pa., Jan. 23 (AP).—A twin motored army bomber, forced down in a snowstorm near this southwestern Pennsylvania community, took off today from the broad, double lane Pennsylvania turnpike.

The plane, piloted by Lieut. Ogden Pratt, who was alone, roared down a three-quarter mile level stretch, soared into the air, and cleared an overhead bridge by 100 feet.

Pratt then circled back, tipped his wings to a crowd that had watched the takeoff, and headed toward Middletown, Pa., airport. Police closed the turnpike to traffic for three-fourths of a mile for the takeoff.

PEARL HARBOR'S DISASTER REPORT NEAR, SAYS F. D. R.

Hasn't Decided if It Will Be Suppressed.

of their commands in order to permit them to give their undivided attention to the investigation.

Court Martial a Possibility

In the incidental shakeup and reorganization, however, it became apparent that they would not be restored to their commands and that they had been permanently replaced, whatever the Roberts board might report. Court martialing of these officers remains a possibility, particularly if the Roberts board sustains Secretary Knox's judgment that they were to blame.

Whether the responsibility extends to higher places in Washington is a question up to the Roberts board to decide. Immediately superior to the commanders in Hawaii were Adm. Harold R. Stark, chief of naval operations, and Gen. George C. Marshall, chief of staff of the army. As a result of the shakeup following the Pearl Harbor disaster, Adm. Stark was relieved of all direction of the operations of our sea forces, which was transferred to Adm. Ernest J. King, the new commander of the United States fleet. It was explained that Adm. Stark had been overburdened with duties.

Question of Precautions.

The Roberts board report is looked to for answer to the question whether Adm. Stark and Gen. Marshall took precautions to guard against a surprise attack on the Hawaiian and Philippine Islands when it was apparent that relations with Japan were nearing the breaking point and the President was appealing to the mikado to avert war. Presumably neither the army nor the navy intelligence services had obtained any information of the impending attack, altho in the case of Pearl Harbor the Japanese warships must have been steaming toward Hawaii for at least two weeks to have been able to make the attack on Dec. 7.

The documentary evidence available to the Roberts board unquestionably establishes whether responsibility for the greatest military disaster in our history extends to Secretaries Knox and Stimson, who were in a position to learn at first hand from the President himself the precarious state of our relations with Japan.

Military Warned by Hull.

It is no secret that Secretary of State Cordell Hull warned the war and navy departments to be prepared for a sudden attack by the Japanese, possibly while the peace negotiations here were still in progress. This, of course, is exactly what happened.

The only matter in doubt appears to be whether Mr. Hull personally warned Secretaries Knox and Stimson or went over their heads for reasons of his own and communicated his apprehensions to their subordinates. Secretary Hull declined to discuss the matter pending the Roberts board report.

Unless the Roberts board gives them a clean bill of health Messrs. Knox and Stimson will face the question of resigning their portfolios in order that public confidence in the conduct of the war may be restored. Already their removal from office has been demanded by members of congress who feel that our war effort will not command complete public confidence so long as it is conducted by the two cabinet officers to whose administration will attach forever the stigma of the greatest military and naval disaster in American history.

Disaster Refuted Knox.

For Secretary Knox the humiliation was particularly acute. He had been making public speeches shouting for intervention and proclaiming the navy was ready for war. On the very day of the Pearl Harbor attack there was published his annual report which he began thus:

"I am proud to report that the American people may feel fully confident in their navy. In my opinion, the loyalty, morale, and technical ability of the personnel are without superior. On any comparable basis, the United States navy is second to none."

That the responsibility for the disaster extends to so high a place as the Presidency is generally regarded inconceivable. That Mr. Roosevelt as commander in chief had taken what he believed to be adequate precautions against a surprise attack is taken for granted. He was well aware of the danger and was exceedingly active in directing our armed forces, particularly the navy, which was the apple of his eye.

Marie Dionne, who is reported to have developed a muscular ailment in one leg.

CALL SPECIALIST TO EXAMINE LEG OF AILING QUINT

Dionne Doctor Reports Suspected Atrophy.

TORONTO, Ontario, Jan. 23 (AP).—The provincial government of Ontario took time off from its war work today and, like any other anxious parent, called in the doctors to examine one of its five wards, Marie Dionne of the quintuplets, who has developed a muscular ailment in one of her legs.

Since the 7 year old girls are wards of the crown and the provincial government, the announcement was made by Ontario Premier Mitchell Hepburn who said that while the ailment was not alarming a consultation would be held. Atrophy is suspected.

[Atrophy is the medical term for wasting, in this case of a muscle. There are two general types, caused either by some circulation or nerve failure. Best information in this instance is that the injury is to a nerve, in which case Chicago medical authorities said it was more than likely the child would fully recover.]

Dr. Dafoe to Assist.

Dr. John Laing McDonald, an orthopedic specialist, of Toronto, Dr. Amyot of Montreal, and Dr. Allan Roy Dafoe, official physician of the sisters, will examine the little girl and consult Sunday at the nursery in Callander.

The preliminary report on Marie's condition was made by Dr. I. Joyal of North Bay, who was called in when Oliva Dionne, father of the girls, said he feared something was wrong. Dr. Dafoe was out of the country at the time.

No Slight Intended.

"There was no intention of slighting Dr. Dafoe," Hepburn said. "It is his privilege as the quints' doctor to be present at the examination.

"I tried to get in touch with him when Dr. Joyal's report reached me and learned he was out of the country. He is back now and will of course be present if he wishes to be."

Approve Contract for New Chicago Housing Project

Washington, D. C., Jan. 23 (AP).—The Federal Works agency today announced that the United States Housing authority had approved a $3,337,000 contract for construction of 834 housing units in Chicago on a site bounded by Roosevelt road, Racine avenue, and 14th and Loomis streets. The contract for general construction went to the Patrick Warren Construction company, Chicago. The development will include two story group houses, apartments, and a community and administration building.

12½ BILLION WAR BILL FOR PLANES VOTED BY HOUSE

Sum Includes Expansion of Production.

BY WILLIAM STRAND.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Jan. 23.—Without a dissenting vote, the house today passed and sent to the senate the largest single appropriation bill ever presented to congress for military purposes.

It was a measure calling for the expenditure of $12,555,872,474, largely for production of fighting aircraft for the army. Admittedly, it involves the greatest dislocation, readjustment and conversion of industry that the world has ever seen.

The bill was called up in the house at 11:15 a. m. and less than four hours later was on its way to the senate. With Republicans and Democrats voting together in a monotonous chant of "Ayes," the chamber piled up an overwhelming total of 389 votes in its favor.

First War Appropriation.

It was the first appropriation bill for military purposes offered since the declaration of war on the axis and came less than a week after President Roosevelt requested an additional 28½ billions for the army and navy.

Total war commitments at the end of 1941 were approximately 75 billions. Today's appropriation raises the total to more than 87½ billions. The total direct cost of American participation in the last war, records show, was 22 billions.

In addition to approximately 12 billions 525 millions for the war department, the new appropriation measure contained 30 millions for the Tennessee Valley authority for construction of the Douglas dam on the French Broad river. Debate on this section threw the chamber into an uproar, lead to scathing denunciations of the TVA and charges of tricky parliamentary tactics on the part of Rep. Clarence Cannon [D., Mo.], chairman of the house appropriations committee and manager of the bill.

Inclusion of this appropriation in a defense measure was described by critics of the TVA as merely a device for securing the Douglas dam appropriation under the cloak of patriotism. It was recalled that previous attempts to put the same appropriation measure thru as a separate measure have been defeated.

Southerners Defend Appropriation.

A number of southern Democrats, lead by the Tennessee bloc, sought to quell the rising tide of objections by warning that the nation faces a power shortage in 1943 and the dam will provide additional facilities for the manufacture of aluminum for aircraft.

The controversy came to a climax as the bill was being read preparatory to final passage. Rep. William Lambertson [R., Kas.] was on his feet seeking to introduce an amendment striking the TVA appropriation. As the clerk finished intoning this section Cannon was recognized and inserted a paragraph allotting $800,000 traveling expense for state department attachés and their families returning from wartorn Europe.

This amendment was quickly adopted taking the chamber beyond the TVA section. Under the rules of the chamber, therefore, Lambertson was prevented from offering his amendment.

Assailed as Trickery.

Cannon, squat and round shouldered, who is known as a sharp parliamentarian, sat unmoved as members on both sides arose to suggest that he permit the chamber to go back and resume discussion of the Douglas dam question.

"I am surprised at the parliamentary trickery being resorted to in order to get the TVA aproriation passed," shouted Rep. John Taber [R., N Y.], ranking minority member of the appropriations committee.

At this point it began to appear that the house rebelliously might resort to a fillibuster to embarrass the appropriations chairman, but ruffled feelings were quickly smoothed over and passage of the bill followed.

The army appropriation is divided as follows:

Airplanes, complete	$ 7,144,056,340
Spare engines	390,421,240
Spare parts	1,506,895,510
Total air corps	9,041,373,090
Armament for airplane	247,740,800
Aircraft cannon and small arms ammunition	383,462,973
Bombs and pyroterhnics	916,744,756
Total ordnance	1,547,948,529
Signal corps, radio equipment for planes	680,242,160
Chemical warfare service	323,308,675
Expediting production [facilities]	933,000,000
Grand total	$12,525,872,474

During hearings on the measure, Gen. Henry H. Arnold, chief of the army air corps, revealed that the new funds will provide 23,000 combat planes and 10,000 training craft, a total of 33,000 as the first step in meeting Mr. Roosevelt's avowed goal of 60,000 planes in 1942 for the army and navy, and 125,000 in 1943.

Will Need More Later.

Under plans now being prepared by the war department, the committee informed the house, additional funds will be necessary to complete the President's unprecedented program for aircraft production. The funds in today's bill, said the committee, will [1] prevent a decline in production which otherwise would occur in August because of the fulfilment of existing orders; [2] fill up new production capacity now being built, and [3] increase capacity for production of bomber types.

The 933 million dollar fund for expediating production, it was explained, will be used for creation of additional aircraft production facilities, as well as weapons and ammunition to equip fighter planes for combat.

Following is a general breakdown of the types of facilities to be covered under the allotment:

ASSEMBLY OF AIR FRAMES.
Component parts—accessories, including radio and signal equipment, and special raw materials and semifinished materials	$635,000,000
Aircraft engines and component parts	318,000,000
	$753,000,000
ORDNANCE AND CHEMICAL WARFARE AIRCRAFT EQUIPMENT, AMMUNITION.
Aircraft armament	$ 25,000,000
Bombs	115,000,000
Small arms ammunition and ammunition for aircraft cannon	40,000,000
	$180,000,000
Total	$933,000,000

Entirely new production capacity under the program will be limited chiefly to creation of bomber assembly plants, the committee reported, while the bulk of the expenditures will go for conversion and expansion of existing facilities. In some instances, it is expected, such expansion will require additions to plants, but in the main the appropriation is necessary for the tooling up process which embraces production, purchase, and installation of war machinery.

Committee Report Censored.

Little else bordering on detailed information was contained in the transcript of the committee hearings, which was heavily censored by the members, themselves, and military officials. For reasons of military secrecy, the committee admitted, all the testimony of significance was given in executive session and off the record.

From that portion of the testimony that the committee chose to make public, however, it transpired that production on the program probably will not be completed until late in 1943.

Arnold Praises U. S. Planes.

The printed transcript also disclosed that Gen. Arnold was called upon to defend the airplane production program from charges of waste and inefficiency contained in a report issued last week by a special senate committee investigating the defense program. The committee, which is headed by Sen. Harry S. Truman [D., Mo.] asserted that only 25 per cent of the nation's aircraft can be considered equal or superior to types being produced by the axis powers.

Replying to statements in the Truman report, the air corps chief said it was true he had said that the P-40 type of plane is no longer regarded as better than a good pursuit type of training plane. But since the original P-40, he said, there have been developed the P-40 A, B, C, D, E, and F, which have been found to be very effective. He cited instances where the newer P-40s have triumphed over superior enemy forces in Egypt, the near east, China and in the early clashes in the Philippines.

Arrive from Africa

Dr. Edmund Flexman and his wife and son.

The safe voyage of a Chicago medical missionary, his wife and baby son across the submarine infested Atlantic ocean from Africa was revealed with their arrival in New York late yesterday. They are Dr. Edmund Flexman, 31 years old, Mrs. Eleanor Flexman, and Edmund Jr., 5 months old. Dr. Flexman called his parents, Mr. and Mrs. James Flexman, 4924 North Hamilton avenue, but gave no details of the crossing except to say that it had taken more than three weeks.

Dr. Flexman and his wife went to Liberia in July, 1939, from the Lutheran Memorial church, Campbell and Wilson avenues. Edmund Jr. was born in Liberia last August.

LOWDEN RECALLS LAST WAR, URGES: KEEP OUR UNITY

Tells of Troubles During His Governorship.

BY ARTHUR EVANS.

Frank O. Lowden, Illinois' governor in World war No. 1, who celebrates his 81st birthday Monday, made some observations yesterday on the present war. "The main thing," he said, "is to hold this unity which the Japs gave us. Nothing so unified the nation as the treacherous, infamous attack on Pearl Harbor, while they were negotiating with us in Washington. As terrible as that disaster was, it may in the end turn out a blessing.

"I think we've got to prepare for a long war, but we're in it whether it could have been avoided or not and we've got to win. We'll have some dark days; we've all got to be prepared for sacrifices and everybody must do what he can. But we're going to win, I have no doubt of that."

Leaves for Arizona Tuesday.

The Sage of Sinnissippi farm, twice a candidate for the Republican nomination for President and known as the man who in his career has turned down more appointments to high office than almost any other person in American history, is finishing a sojourn in St. Luke's hospital—a routine physical examination.

He plans to leave Tuesday for his usual winter trip to Arizona. He has been made honorary chairman of the Illinois Defense council by Gov. Dwight H. Green, present wartime governor.

Gov. Lowden appeared to be in excellent health and spirits yesterday and was in a fine mood for reminiscences.

He spoke of the Illinois Council of Defense of 1917-'19. In the first world war the Japs had not given America instantaneous unity, and in Illinois there was dissension between the governor and the mayor of Chicago. Pacifist groups and their hostility to the war effort were a problem.

"On the council of defense," said Mr. Lowden, "I appointed men like Ogden Armour and John A. Spoor, industrialists, and John H. Walker, president of the state federation of labor, and Victor Olander, another great labor leader. They held their first meeting in my office in Springfield. I found them in groups in corners of the room, they had never met each other.

Soon Working Together.

"I took them to the mansion for luncheon and got them warmed up. Soon they were working together on the best of terms, calling each other by their first names. The council was recognized for its magnificent work. There was never a controversial question on which there was a divided vote.

"I told Gov. Green I would accept the honorary chairmanship, that I have not the strength to engage actively but that I'd always be ready for consultation. The defense council will have much to do; the federal government is going to unload a lot of activities on the state councils. For instance, it has already turned over tire administration."

During the war Lowden's aptitude for looking ahead bore great results. His organization aided the farmers, who increased the Illinois wheat yield 70 per cent, doubled the barley crop, and quintupled the rye crop. The governor is a farmer himself, with 4,500 acres at Sinnissippi farm in Ogle county. As war governor his record was such that the Democratic state convention in his midterm in 1918 gave him an uproarious indorsement.

Budget System Set Up.

Lowden's first feat was to get thru his administrative code, which consolidated 125 departments, bureaus, and boards into nine departments. He established a budget system. He trimmed out soft snap jobs for burocrats, cut the state tax rate 15 per cent even during the war, and chopped it another 20 per cent after the armistice. He launched an extensive good roads program.

When the "Peace Doves" headed toward Chicago in September, 1918, for a pactifist demonstration, the governor sent in troops. The pacifist crowd had been chased out of North Dakota, Minnesota, and Wisconsin. The mayor of Chicago instructed the police to let them meet here. The governor sent in soldiers to stop the meeting.

"I had an anxious night," said Mr. Lowden. "But when the troops marched in they were cheered."

During the war the governor, too, was getting ready for the aftermath. After the armistice there was great industrial unrest. Before troubles broke Lowden was busy with agencies that later mitigated the unrest. As fast as the pot simmered, he had tactful men on the spot who worked to bring antagonistic forces together. In the steel strike, South Chicago potentially was as troublesome a spot as nearby Gary, Ind. In October, 1919, Maj. Gen. Leonard Wood, at the request of Gov. James P. Goodrich of Indiana, placed Gary, East Chicago, and Indiana Harbor under martial law, and called in 4,000 federal troops who were put in control of Gary. But in Illinois, it was different.

"The steel strike was the worst strike in my administration," said Mr. Lowden.

"In Gary there was much violence and many were killed. People came to me from Waukegan, Joliet, and South Chicago, where we had a lot of steel mills. They were scared and wanted to resort to all kinds of drastic measures. I told them that the people were against violence and asked if their communities were organized to take care of any violence. I said 'If you can't do that I'll furnish good men from the reserve militia to work out an organization with you and to create a peaceful atmosphere. I'll always maintain order.'"

No Violence in Illinois.

"At Gary there was all that trouble, but in Illinois we got thru without any loss of life or damage to property or violence. I've always been a great believer in getting people together."

In the Chicago street car strike in the summer of 1919, Gov. Lowden came up post haste from Springfield. He pulled in union leaders and managers. The management had been talking of meeting the walkout with strike breakers.

"Old stuff! Dead as the dodo," roared the governor. "Reason, not force, is the spirit of the times."

He jumped over the heads of the superintendents and managers, landed on the financial interests right in the counting room, and laid down the law. The strike was adjusted. The race riots of 1919 brought another demonstration of the Lowden technique.

Lowden's record as governor made him a candidate for the Republican nomination for President in 1920, but the deadlock with Gen. Wood gave the nomination to Warren G. Harding, a dark horse.

What Might Have Been.

Many conjectures have since been made as to how the course of history might have been affected had Lowden won. In 1924 he rejected the nomination for Vice President after the convention at Cleveland had tendered it. Again in 1928, as favorite son of the agricultural midwest, he was a candidate for the Presidential nomination, but when the Kansas City convention threw the corn belt farm plank out of the window, he withdrew. In campaigns since then, Republican chiefs have made pilgrimages to Sinnissippi for consultation with the former governor.

Early in his career, Mr. Lowden began his record of turning down appointments to high office. "Public office never had an appeal for me except as an opportunity for achievement," he said.

President McKinley asked him to become first assistant postmaster general, with later promotion to postmaster general. He declined. President Taft asked him to become first assistant secretary of the navy. President Harding twice asked him to take the post of secretary of the navy.

Envoy's Post Offered.

"I told him I knew nothing of the navy," said Mr. Lowden. Harding later offered him the ambassadorship to Great Britain. "I told him the story of the man who got back from Europe and a friend asked him what was the most interesting thing he saw on the stop. The traveler answered, 'The lighthouse at Sandy Hook, on my return.' I said I'd been abroad often and always returned with that same feeling and couldn't think of going across for four years." Later Harding asked him to go to Japan as ambassador.

President Coolidge offered Mr. Lowden the ambassadorship to London. "I was in my library at the farm," said the ex-governor, "and fell to thinking that here I had three daughters, unmarried and attractive, if I do say it myself, and to many women the glamor of the court of St. James makes an appeal. I said to myself, maybe I'd better consult my family instead of doing all the deciding.

"So I went into the living room and put it up to my wife and daughters. And without hesitation, they said unanimously, 'O, we'd much prefer to live at Sinnissippi farm than at the Court of St. James.'"

CIO CHIEFS ROW AS F. D. R. OFFERS NEW LABOR PLAN

3 from Each Big Union to Form Liaison Group.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 23 [Special].—While CIO leaders challenged each other's authority tonight over a revived suggestion of peace with the AFL, President Roosevelt was reported to have moved onto the labor scene with a plan to give each of the rival organizations three voices in the nation's armament program. These six are to form a labor liaison board which will deal directly with the President on all problems affecting labor in the war effort.

The President's proposal for such a joint CIO-AFL labor board was regarded here as disapproval of the suggestion of John L. Lewis, former CIO czar, that the two warring groups resume negotiations to mend their long breach.

Seeks Peace Without Unity.

Instead of facilitating a full fledged merger in the labor movement, it was believed Mr. Roosevelt's move would head off such a maneuver—altho he has called for labor peace in the interests of the national effort—and would compel peace without unity under the wartime labor truce he reputedly had proposed.

However, the likelihood that the CIO would give the signal for new unity talks at this time appeared more remote tonight when Lewis tartly declined in an open letter to Philip Murray, his successor as CIO president, to present his views on labor peace to the CIO executive board at a meeting in New York tomorrow.

"I will not attend your board meeting," Lewis said flatly and went on to challenge the power of his erstwhile friend.

Murray, indicating resentment at Lewis' action in proposing peace meetings without consulting him, said in a letter to Lewis that any arrangements in behalf of the CIO with reference to AFL unity would "necessarily have to be initiated" thru the office of the president of the CIO.

Asserts Murray in Error.

"Such an assumption upon your part constitutes an astonishing error," Lewis replied. "No such delegation of power has been given you by the constitution of the CIO, by any legislative convention of the CIO, nor by any device of parliamentary procedure. To the contrary, the third constitutional convention of the CIO specifically conveyed this authority to three of its representatives, designating them by name."

The standing committee is composed of Lewis, Murray and Sidney Hillman, president of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers and now a government labor official with whom, it is said, Lewis does not speak. Lewis signed his letter to Murray as "chairman, standing peace negotiations committee of the CIO."

"Under the CIO constitution," Lewis continued, "the executive board is an inferior agency without power to nullify or change the enactment of a constitutional amendment. The statements widely circulated that the undersigned acted in the premise without proper authority therefore fall of their own weight.

Denies "Merger" Commitments.

"Your letter and your public statements imply that without consultation I have taken it upon myself to assume the authority to blueprint some plan for labor peace between the CIO and the AFL; that in addition I have tentatively agreed to the acceptance of certain leadership that might in the end dismember the CIO if such coalition were formed. Nothing could be farther from the truth. I have no commitments of any character to any one that affect any phase of this problem."

Lewis called upon the executive board to accept one of three courses: Support his proposal, convene a special national convention to act on the peace suggestion, or submit the proposal to referendum of CIO membership.

In New York, where the CIO executive committee was in closed session today, Murray said the question of unity with the AFL and other proposals regarding CIO-AFL relations would be discussed tomorrow, at which time would be read a letter he had received from President Roosevelt regarding CIO-AFL peace suggestions.

While the President said at his press conference today that he had no news to give out on his reported proposal for establishment of a joint CIO-AFL committee, the unofficial word in Washington was that Murray had agreed to recommend acceptance of the President's plan at the executive committee tomorrow.

AFL leaders, headed by President William Green and Secretary-Treasurer George Meany, already have approved the White Houes proposal and it was believed that these two men and Daniel J. Tobin would be nominated as AFL representatives.

STATE CIO UNIONS BACK MURRAY IN LABOR PARLEYS

Leaders of CIO unions in Illinois last night gave their support to Philip Murray, CIO president, in whatever course he follows to carry out proposals for a labor peace settlement between the CIO and the AFL.

The action of the Illinois State Industrial Union council, headed by Ray Edmundson of Springfield, district president of the United Mine Workers of America and state head of the CIO, was a slap at John L. Lewis, international president of the UMWA and former head of the CIO, who has been trying to supplant Murray in the peace movement.

The Illinois council said a constructive beginning toward labor peace had been made under the leadership of Murray and decided to "conform with whatever actions and decisions the president and executive board of the CIO may take regarding the question of labor unity."

Agrees to Divorce

MRS. SARA YONES.

Sara Yones, 23 years old, 5416 Dorchester avenue, did a patriotic deed yesterday: She agreed to a divorce rather than separate maintenance so that her husband, Irving, 29, of 3145 Medill avenue, would be able to join the army. Attorney Sol. R. Friedman said his client wished to do her part and would also waive alimony. Attorney Charles C. Cooley, Yones' representative, said that was fine. Circuit Judge Thomas J. Lynch set next Friday for a default hearing on the divorce.

POLICE BLAMED FOR SHOOTING OF NEGRO SOLDIERS

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Jan. 23.—Civilian policemen and a military policeman were blamed tonight by the war department for the riot at Alexandria, La., in which 29 Negro soldiers were injured on Jan. 16.

In a preliminary report on the investigation, which has been under way for two weeks, the war department said that the policemen indulged in "indiscriminate and unnecessary shooting."

The riot was started when a Negro soldier resisted arrest by a military policeman, according to the report. Civilian policemen joined with the military policeman when the Negro's comrades gathered.

"Altho a show of force may have been justified to disperse the excited crowd," the report condemned the indiscriminate shooting. It said that the investigation is being continued with a view to correcting deficiencies in military police control. None of the Negro soldiers was critically injured.

GRAND JURY TOLD POLICY WHEELS STILL OPERATING

Despite the grand jury investigation into the policy game rackets, the policy wheels are still operating, G. W. Lambert, president of the National League of Justice, reported to the jurors yesterday.

Lambert was reported to have told the jurors that he has information of at least 20 wheels operating and that he knows of 14 wheels in play.

Six police captains made brief appearances before the grand jury and were told to return later with detailed information on bookies formerly operating in their districts. The captains and their districts are Martin McCormick, Gresham; Patrick Crotty, Grand Crossing; Matthew Froelich, South Chicago; Thomas Kilroy, Kensington; Thomas Connelly, Burnside, and Mark Boyle, Englewood.

Eugene O'Connor Reported to Be in Serious Condition

Eugene O'Connor, head of the state's attorney's blue sky investigation division, who has been in Mercy hospital for several weeks and reported stricken by a kidney ailment, was said last night to be in serious condition. He is 40 years old and has been in the state's attorney's office for the last nine years.

SENATE VOTES $60,000 FOR WAR EFFORTS QUIZ

Truman Committee Will Continue Work.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Jan. 23.—An appropriation of $60,000 for continuation of the Truman committee's investigation of the war program was voted unanimously by the senate today at the request of Sen. Scott W. Lucas [D., Ill.], chairman of the committee to audit and control the senate's contingent expenses.

Sen. Lucas, an ardent administration supporter, commended the work of the special investigating committee headed by Sen. Harry S. Truman [D., Mo.]. He said the report issued by the committee last week "demonstrates inefficiency and laxity and selfishness upon the part of a great many persons who have something to do with attempting to give this country the type of national defense that is so necessary if the American way of life is to continue."

Calls Pearl Harbor "Debacle."

"I hope," Lucas told the senate, "that since the debacle at Pearl Harbor, some individuals who seem to have nothing but selfishness in their minds in connection with these huge defense contracts and other phases of our defense program, will at least remember that some other persons in this country are making tremendous sacrifices and are attempting to play the game in connection with winning this war in the way that they should.

"I hope the Truman committee will continue to operate in the future as it has in the past. If a committee of this kind is constantly in touch with what is going on thruout the country so far as defense problems are concerned, in my opinion it will have a tendency to check in the future the very things that the able senator from Missouri and his committee found to have occurred in the past."

Committee Deserves Praise.

Lucas said the committee deserved the commendation of the senate "as well as that of the patriotic people of the country."

The committee's request for $100,000 for the continuation of its work was cut to $60,000 by the Lucas committee on the understanding, Lucas said, that if the investigation should require more money in the future it will be available.

Sen. George W. Norris [Ind., Neb.] said he did not want the Truman committee to feel embarrassed about coming to the senate for more money. Lucas assured Norris that there would be no need for embarrassment.

Norris expressed the hope that the committee will make reports "from time to time in order that the senate and the country may know what is being done."

FIVE PUBLISHERS NAMED ADVISORS ON CENSORSHIP

Washington, D. C., Jan. 23 (AP).—Byron Price, director of the Office of Censorship, announced today that representatives of five publishers' associations had accepted invitations to serve on an advisory council in connection with administration of the code of wartime practices for American newspapers. Members of the council:

Cranston Williams, New York, general manager of the American Newspaper Publishers' association; Dwight Marvin, Troy, N. Y., Record, president of the American Society of Newspaper Editors; W. L. Daley, Washington representative of the National Editorial association; John W. Potter, Rock Island, Ill., Argus, acting president of the Inland Press association, and Charles P. Manship Sr. of the State Times and Advocate, Baton Rouge, La., president of the Southern Newspaper Publishers' association.

A similar council of broadcasting officials will be appointed to consult about administration of the radio code.

DRAFT IS NEARER FOR PROTEGE OF MRS. ROOSEVELT

Lash Is Reclassified by Local Board.

BY WILLARD EDWARDS.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Jan. 23.—A majority of the Dies committee expressed satisfaction today with the report from New York that Joseph P. Lash, protégé of Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, will be reclassified by his draft board and put in class 1-A, where he will be subject to an immediate summons into the army.

Chairman Martin Dies [D., Tex.], however, expressed the personal opinion that Lash, who has been connected with several communistic organizations, should not be drafted into the armed forces. No person whose loyalty has ever been questioned in the slightest degree, he said, should be permitted to serve in the army.

Aided by Mrs. Roosevelt.

Lash, with the sponsorship of Mrs. Roosevelt, has been seeking a commission with the naval intelligence. Turned down because of his past record, he made two appearances before the Dies committee this week, asking for a review of the record and avowing his repentence for his past connections.

Instead of giving Lash the whitewash he sought the committee voted to transmit to the army and navy intelligence and all defense agencies the voluminous record of the so-called youth leader [now 32 years old] who once wrote that he would never support any war in which the United States should become engaged because he was sure such a war would be "imperialistic."

Dies said that before the committee Lash admitted his various connections with communist front organizations and his authorship of publications in which he expressed communistic and pacifist views. Lash denied he had ever been a communist and told of dissolving his connections with all the groups after the soviet-Nazi pact.

Dies Opposes Induction.

Concerning Lash's induction into the army, Dies declared:

"Pearl Harbor showed the danger of having any one in the armed forces who has ever sympathized with a movement connected with a foreign country. Lash may have repented but we can't take any chances."

Lash was executive secretary of the American Student Union which promoted anti-war strikes among college youth. Such strikes, he once wrote, were a "dress rehearsal for the strikes which we shall promote if the United States ever becomes involved in war."

When he testified before the Dies committee in November, 1939, Mrs. Roosevelt accompanied him to the hearing and took notes. In November, 1940, when Lash was national secretary of the International Student service, a number of ISS sponsors, including Mrs. Roosevelt, wrote a letter to newspapers condemning attacks upon Lash as "not only unjust to him but to the movement which he serves."

REDS RECAPTURE 2,000 TOWNS IN 65 MILE SWEEP

120 Miles from Latvia; Kill 17,000 Germans.

MOSCOW, Jan. 23 (AP).—Red armies raging forward on the north central front for the greatest advance yet of their mighty offensive are within 120 miles of the Latvian border in an enveloping drive which threatens the entire German position east of White Russia, the supreme soviet command announced officially tonight.

Screened by a blinding snowstorm, the advancing soviet forces pounced upon the unsuspecting Germans, killed 17,000 of the foe, imprisoned hundreds of others, and recaptured 2,000 towns and villages in this 65 mile advance, a special communique said.

Thrust Cuts Rail Line.

The spearhead of the soviet drive has reached Kholm, which is on the Lovat river west of a north-south line running thru Smolensk, the main headquarters of Adolf Hitler's central front armies. This thrust cut the vital Rzhev-Veliki Luki rail line

Kholm, 260 miles northwest of Moscow, was reported to have been the northern pivot of the winter line which the German field marshal, Fedor von Bock, originally suggested the Nazis should try to hold. Hitler was declared to have overruled him and determined that the winter line should run well to the east of that point.

Thus the Russians now are in position not only to outflank Hitler's central front positions but to envelop his forces besieging Leningrad as well.

The soviet drive swept the Germans from the snow drifted Valdai hills, whose lakes form the headwaters of the Volga, and regained control of half of the 300 mile long rail line connecting the main Moscow-Leningrad and Moscow-Vitebsk railroad.

List Some of Towns Taken.

The rail towns of Toropetz, 48 miles southeast of Kholm; Zapadnaya Dvina, 18 miles southeast of Toropetz; Andreapol, a district center in Pskov province 30 miles east of Toropetz Olenino, 30 miles due west of Rzhev, and Staraya Toropa were among the more important settlements regained.

The most violent fighting of the year marked the progress of the Red sweep in the 40 mile sector between Novgorod and the Moscow-Leningrad railway. An unexpected rise in subzero temperatures, which brought general snowfall, preceded the Russian assault upon Field Marshal Gen. Wilhelm Ritter von Leeb's positions there.

Coupled with this new offensive were announcements that the Germans had been hurled back 23 miles west of Mozhaisk in the crumbling salient west of Moscow, and an accelerated advance by Marshal Semeon Timoshenko's forces in the Ukraine along a 100 mile stretch between Kursk and Kharkov.

Retake 98 Villages.

The liberators of Mozhaisk, who were crunching forward over deep snow for gains of six to seven miles a day, captured 98 more villages in the vicinity of reoccupied Uvarovo, Smolensk province town. In two days the Germans lost 1,290 officers and men in this area, the Russians said.

Retreating Germans, trying desperately to reach the railhead at Vyazma, 70 miles west of Mozhaisk, were under constant harassment by soviet scouts. Russian armies racing from north and south to trap the beaten Nazis were taking village after village in their sweep, duplicating triumphs of their forbears against Napoleon in 1812. Rzhev, northern anchor of the old German winter line, is believed to be encircled.

War dispatches from the Ukraine said Timoshenko's advancing armies had recaptured 44 towns and villages.

Some observers said it was possible that Orel, 80 miles north of Kursk and 210 miles south of Moscow, already might have been retaken. Orel, nearly encircled for a fortnight, was the southern anchor of the Germans' now shattered Moscow front.

Soviet airmen participating in the drive listed 23 German planes downed yesterday against eight of their own losses. Red fleet units in the arctic were credited with sinking three German transports.

STRIKE WITHOUT NOTICE; BRITISH UNIONISTS JAILED

LONDON, Jan. 23 (AP).—Three labor leaders were given jail sentences today and 1,027 Kent coal field workers were summoned to court, charged with striking without giving previous notice.

One labor leader received a two months' sentence and the others one month each. Unless the miners return to work, the other summonses will be brought before the court for action.

The strike has been in progress several weeks for higher wages. Pronouncing sentence, the judge said:

"We are at war and coal is a very important commodity, and as much of it as possible ought to be turned out."

Rumanian Premier Names General as War Minister

BERNE, Switzerland, Jan. 23—Gen. Ion Antonescu, premier, minister of war, and commander in chief of the Rumanian forces on the Russian front, signed a decree today naming Divisional General Pantazi, undersecretary of state at the ministry of war, to the post of minister of war, owing to "pressing occupations of the premier in other fields of activity." Gen. Pantazi will hold also the post of minister of national defense.

HAILS BRAZIL BAN ON AXIS AIR LINE AS BLOCKADE AID

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Jan. 23.—The Brazilian government's action in shutting down the Lati airplane service between Italy and South America closed an "irritating" gap in the British blockade, Hugh Dalton, minister of economic warfare, told luncheon guests at Guildhall today.

Thru this air line, he said, axis nations "exported propaganda and fifth columnists" as well as articles of high value and small bulk, such as pharmaceutical products, and imported badly needed mica, industrial diamonds, and platinum.

Dalton said Lati pilots were "members of the Italian air force whose duties included observation and reporting of the movement of our shipping, reconnaissance flights, and contact with enemy submarines."

Vichy, France, is the only "important leak in the blockade now remaining," Dalton asserted, Japanese loopholes having been plugged last July by the freezing order.

DANISH MINISTER IN CITY.

Henrik De Kaufman, Danish minister to the United States, arrived in Chicago yesterday from a speaking tour on the west coast. He will depart for Washington, D. C., tomorrow where he will resume his official duties.

He Makes a Shift

Richard Scharff, 21 years old, left the navy yesterday. But that's the army's gain—for he applied for enrollment in the army aviation cadet program and was sworn in by Lieut. Col. Edward H. Shaifer.

"I'd been stationed at Navy Pier," Richard explained, "and I figured there would be more action for me in the air service. So I obtained my discharge as a seaman first class in the naval reserve."

Scharff is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Scharff of St. Louis, Mo. He was employed by an adding machine company before he went on active navy duty last June. His brother, Robert, is a navy ensign and is with a destroyer in the North Atlantic.

Report Von Papen on Way from Turkey to Germany

ANKARA, Turkey, Jan. 22 [Delayed]—(AP).—German Ambassador Franz von Papen, who boarded a train at Istanbul today, is believed en route to Germany. His wife preceded him there to visit their son, who was wounded on the Russian front.

TORPEDOES MISS U. S. LINER TWICE, NAVY ANNOUNCES

New York, Jan. 23 (AP).—The Grace liner Santa Paula, which arrived here today, was twice attacked by submarines off the West African coast and narrowly escaped collision with unidentified craft as she neared her home shores, it was announced by the third naval district.

The navy said that the vessel, due at quarantine early this morning, did not arrive until midafternoon and was held up for another hour while eight crewmen and four passengers, all suffering from malaria, were removed for hospitalization.

Missed—by 20 Feet.

Two days off the port of Lagos, on the West African coast, the navy announcement said, a submarine suddenly appeared off the Santa Paula's port bow and fired a torpedo which missed the 9,135 ton vessel by not more than 20 feet.

As the torpedo was fired, the navy said, the Santa Paula's helmsman threw his wheel hard to turn the ship in an effort to avoid being hit.

Second Torpedo Fired.

The same submarine was seen later off the Santa Paula's stern, the navy was informed by passengers and crewmen, and six hours later a second torpedo crossed her bow—fired by an unseen submarine.

Early today off the United States coast, while traveling at full speed, completely blacked out and zigzagging "to avoid submarines," the Santa Paula narrowly escaped collision with unidentified vessels which were being operated in a similar manner, the navy said.

AXIS FORCES LASH BACK IN LIBYA TO RETAKE AGEDABIA

90 Mile Advance Covered by Waves of Planes.

CAIRO, Egypt, Jan. 23 (AP).—In unexpected force and covered by waves of bombers and fighter planes, Gen. Erwin Rommel's Nazi forces tonight had plunged 90 miles northeast to reoccupy Agedabia on the lower western side of the hump of Cirenaica and some British observers believed he had pulled the trigger on a full counteroffensive.

Officially the thrust by Rommel from his stronghold near El Agheila, more than 400 miles inside Libya, was described as a "raid in force." It could be that, since the main British forces never had advanced as far west as Agedabia, and in this vast sea of sand, swift and long advances no longer are surprising.

In the front lines, however, British officers and flyers for some days have noted a marked increase in German aerial strength, obviously the result of trans-Mediterranean reënforcements. Moreover, the axis is reported to have been getting 40 per cent of its troop and supply convoys into Tripoli, losing 60 per cent to the British navy and royal air force.

British Defenses Ready.

This evidence of increased axis plane and tank strength in Africa is the basis for the belief in some quarters that Rommel is trying to duplicate the counterassault which last April rolled the Wavell army back to Egypt.

The British 8th army, which began its present drive into the desert last November, has erected defense works to backstop such a counteroffensive

They have improved the roads behind the present lines where they had been chewed up in two months of battle. Guns taken from the axis at strongly defended Halfaya [Hellfire] pass, on the Egyptian frontier, have been woven into the British web.

While British advance forces withdrew from Agedabia, the RAF's bombers blasted Rommel's advancing transports. At one point between Mersa Brega and Agedabia 400 trucks, packed like sardines, were smashed and scattered, air headquarters said.

Batter Enemy Air Force.

Australian fighters pounced on Junkers-87 formations, escorted by German and Italian fighters, shooting down at least three planes and damaging others. From all operations yesterday only two British planes were lost.

The British forward detachments barely had managed to clear the area east of Agedabia of German minefields before Rommel began to backlash along his former course of flight.

From Agedabia, both to the east and north, he has only flat terrain ahead, well suited for tank operations, until it rises into the mountainous sector northwets of Bengazi. Both British and Germans have adequate airfields in the present area and the big question now is the strength of the opposing tank units.

U. S., German Exchange of Aids Awaits Agreement

Friend of the Yanks

[The Friend of the Yanks department will answer draft and military service questions, both in the daily columns and personally if stamped, self-addressed envelopes are sent with the query.]

BY CLAY GOWRAN.

Each mail brings a batch of letters from men in the 20-44 year age group seeking information about the Feb. 16 draft registration, when they will be required to sign up for possible military service. Each man has some problem relating to the draft and is uncertain what he should do about it. Following are several of general interest:

One man writes that he must be in Mexico on business on registration day. Draft regulations provide that such a person may complete his business engagements, but should register immediately upon his return to the United States. It would be wisest for him to register in the city nearest his point of reëntry into the country.

Registrars to Visit Hospitals.

Another explains that he is confined to a hospital and will be unable to report for registration. Such men will be registered by special registrars who will visit the hospitals on registration day.

A third man states that he will move to another city shortly after registration day, and wans to know if he should wait and register belatedly in this other city. No, he should not. This man should register in Chicago on registration day, and then notify his local board here before he moves to the new city.

May Register in Another City.

A worried writer explains that he will be in another city on Feb. 16 and therefore unable to register at his proper registration station. Such a person should register at a registration point in whatever city he happens to find himself on Feb. 16. The selective service headquarters of any city can tell him where to go. Then his registration card will be forwarded to the proper local board in his home city.

Finally—and this is warning to all men of registration age—the penalty for deliberate failure to register on Feb. 16 is imprisonment for not more than five years, a fine of not more than $10,000, or both.

QUESTIONS.

WL. H., Jr. writes: "My son is an aviator on a naval ship in the Pacific. Our letters and packages are not reaching him, according to his letters and cables. We know what his ship is, but in addressing our letters to him we have used just his name [no rank], care of the postmaster at San Francisco. Is this wrong?"

ANSWER: Yes, your method of addressing your mail to him is wrong. You should give your son's name and rank, his ship, and then mark the letter "Care of the Postmaster, San Francisco." The San Francisco postoffice will see that it reaches your boy, no matter where his ship may be assigned to duty. If he were on a ship in Atlantic waters the letter would be sent "Care of the Postmaster, New York."

H. M. writes: "Since I was classified 1-A [available for immediate military service] we've discovered that my wife is going to have a baby. Is there anything we can do about it?"

ANSWER: You should notify your local draft board immediately. They may see fit to change your classification if the facts warrant it.

C. D. writes: "Can a man enlisted in the marines get married without permission of his commanding officer? If he does so, is the punishment serious? You see, this couple has been engaged for a long time and would be much happier married."

ANSWER. Marine corps officers do not encourage marriages among enlisted men unless such men hold the rank of staff or platoon sergeant, or higher. If a marine marries without permission he will not be able to reënlist without the permission of the major general commandant of marines. I understand this is about the only punishment in such cases.

MYSTERIOUS BOMBER RAIDS 'FREE FRENCH' AIRDROME IN AFRICA

LONDON, Jan. 23 (AP).—"Free French" headquarters tonight announced that an unidentified twin-engined aircraft bombed Fort Lamy, capital of the Chad territory in French Equatorial Africa, yesterday.

The statement said 12 German-made bombs were dropped near the airdrome, starting a fire and causing a few casualties.

"Considering the distance between Fort Lamy and the closest air bases of the enemy in Libya," the statement continued, "the question arises whether the attacking aircraft did not have to refuel at an African airport controled by the Vichy [French] government."

SEIZURE OF 13 AXIS AGENTS BY TURKS REPORTED

ISTANBUL, Turkey, Jan. 22 [Delayed]—(AP).—Thirteen axis agents were reported arrested today in a roundup by Turkish officials of an espionage ring with ramifications in Iraq, Iran, Syria, and other Arab countries.

Five were described as Syrians. All 13 were said to have been connected with axis propaganda agencies.

REPORTER TELLS CAPTURE BY NAZI TANKS IN AFRICA

LONDON, Jan. 23 (AP).—A German tank charge forced the surrender of Godfrey H. P. Anderson, a correspondent of the Associated Press of Great Britain, who was captured in North Africa last November.

The British newsman, one of 15 Associated Press men now interned in axis territory, recounted the details in a letter written at a prison camp in Italy and received here today.

"One German tank ran right across the trench in which I was lying," he wrote. "But altho the earth sides caved in, nearly burying me, by some miracle I was not hurt. After that I surrendered."

Anderson apologized for the loss of his services, but asserted "the fault was not really mine."

"The fact that about 100 other officers and two brigadiers were captured at the same time shows that I was not—or should have not—been at a particularly exposed position," he added.

"However, on Sunday morning, Nov. 23, the German tanks had cut us off. There was heavy shelling from all around and we were driven into an uncomfortable circle of fire.

"At noon we were told the position was under control but a little later a new attack developed. For one and a half hours I lay in the trench while shells burst about us and machinegun bullets buzzed overhead.

"Our own tanks ran out of ammunition and at 4 p. m. German Panzer [armored] troops completely overran the position."

Anderson said the Germans treated the prisoners well, but had no food, water, or blankets for them. That night, he said, "was the coldest I ever experienced but the next day I managed to pick up an overcoat as we were marched across the battlefield."

After being taken to Italy aboard an Italian cruiser, Anderson said he found it irksome to be put to bed every night at 8:30 o'clock.

"I am finding it rather a strain to sleep 12 hours every night," he wrote. "Life as a prisoner is extremely monotonous, as you can imagine. Our two meals are the biggest moments of the day and each is keenly awaited, I can assure you.

"Every night I dream that I am free—and every morning I wake up and find that I am not. Anyway, it makes one appreciate the good things of the past and reflect more than ever on one's hopes for the future. Now, less than ever, do I have any doubt as to the outcome of this war."

ROBS TELEGRAPH OFFICE.

A youthful bandit made a return visit yesterday to the Postal Telegraph company office at 320 Madison street and took $8 from the cash register.

8 NAVY MEN DIE AS PLANE FALLS INTO ATLANTIC

Norfolk, Va., Jan. 23 (AP).—A navy plane plunged into the Atlantic ocean early today near Oregon Inlet, N. C., carrying its entire crew of eight men to death, the fifth naval district announced tonight.

The plane sank immediately after striking the water. Officers here said the cause of the crash was not known, and declined to disclose any details concerning the accident.

A board of investigation was at work tonight and salvage operations were under way with "some" bodies reported recovered. The public relations office at the Norfolk naval operating base issued this list of those aboard the plane: Lieut. George Howard M. Gottschall, N. S. N.; Ensign Karl Allen Oliver, U. S. N. R.; Thomas Sheldon Close, aviation ordnance man, second class [naval aviation pilot], U. S. N.; Donald Blake Smith, radioman first class, U. S. N.; Robert Leroy Saltzgraver, photographer, first class, U. S. N.; Cecil Neil O'Gwin, aviation machinist mate, third class, U. S. N.; Gabriel Marcelle Hoflack, aviation machinist mate, first class, U. S. N., and Keith Lloyd McQuady, seaman, second class, U. S. N., Taylor Ridge, Ill.

RADIO'S FULLEST TECHNICAL AID PLEDGED TO U. S.

Suggests Pool of All Patents and Secrets.

BY LARRY WOLTERS.

Radio manufacturing and research organizations of the nation have agreed to give the fullest possible technical aid to the army and navy for the duration of the war. The agreement, as submitted yesterday in Washington by a committee representing manufacturers, is in the form of a recommendation for a pool of information on all inventions and developments in construction of communications, signaling, navigation, radio locator and direction finding equipment.

The order also calls for supplying all technical information on radio apparatus requested by the government and suggests that the government order the manufacture of required apparatus, by whatever company it desires, under government license.

Edwin H. Armstrong, inventor and developer of the system of frequency modulation now in wide use in military services, already has turned over all of his patents, royalty free, to the army. There are reports that other offers of this type soon will be forthcoming.

WILL, the University of Illinois radio station in Urbana, is making arrangements to go on the air Sundays early in February. Heretofore it has broadcast only on weekdays. This added day of programs is planned so the station may make any timely information available to the citizens of Illinois, whether it comes from the faculty or the government.

The university feels that restrictions on automobiles and tires will keep more persons in their homes on Sundays. Many regular weekday features are to be carried on Sundays and others added. A town meeting of the air type of a program with university personages participating is under consideration.

After Feb. 1 the Blue network's Farm and Home hour which has been running 45 minutes for years will be cut to 30 minutes. H. R. Baukhage, who has been the Washington commentator on the program, will start a 15 minute broadcast of his own, immediately after the farm broadcast.

For the second time in a year another new voice is to be heard as Marge in the serial, Myrt and Marge. The new Marge will be Olive Deering, young Broadway actress, who replaces Helen Mack, who is retiring to have a baby. Miss Mack, a former movie starlet, has had the part since the death last year of Donna Damerel, the original Marge.

W-G-N's program "On Guard with the Coast Guard" at 12:15 p. m. today will be presented entirely by personnel of the coast guard. The dramatic program, depicting the story of the coast guard air patrol detachment, will be produced by Lieut. Blair Walliser.

The actors will be Hugh Rowlands, who has been featured in many Chicago shows and plays the lead in "Flying Patrol," now an apprentice seaman; Claude Kirchner, former W-G-N announcer, apprentice seaman, and Hal Strass, who writes the "Americas Speak" program, a yeoman. Guest speaker will be Lieut. Comm. N. S. Fulford.

The V for Victory code signal now tells WMBI listeners the hour. Instead of the usual single note on the hour and half hour, WMBI's station clarions three dots and a dash.

Hunt Arsonist in Fourth Attempt to Burn Church

A search was in progress last night for an arsonist who started the fourth fire in three weeks in the basement of Our Lady of Peace church, at 2002 East 79th street. The same person is also believed to have started four other fires in the neighborhood. Damage to the church was estimated at $350. Previous attempts to burn it were made on Jan. 5, 7 and 9, with slight damage on each occasion.

Triple Yolk Egg

Bessie Vydra with oddity found yesterday by egg candler.

Harry Katz, 7529 Kingston avenue, has candled eggs for 30 years. He averages about 25 cases daily, with 360 eggs in each case. This means that Mr. Katz has candled somewhere around 75 million eggs, and before yesterday he had seen only two triple yolks. Yesterday, while candling away at Hillman's, 28 West Washington street, he found his third. Mr. Katz figures your chances of finding a triple yolked egg are about 15 million to one. That's too easy. He's looking for one with four yolks now.

FBI SEIZES RING PASSING FAKE TRAVEL CHECKS

Indianapolis, Ind., Jan. 23 (AP).—Spencer J. Drayton, in charge of the Indianapolis FBI office, said tonight the FBI has rounded up a ring known to have originated 251 counterfeit travelers' checks and passed them in 27 states. Seven persons are under arrest.

Drayton said the checks were printed in the Knoxville, Tenn., shop of John A. Clancy, operator of the Service Rubber Stamp company, in $10, $20 and $50 denominations and carrying the name of the National City Bank of New York.

Drayton reported they have been passed in Indiana, Illinois, Iowa, Missouri, and 23 other states.

Those in custody are Clancy and his employé, Joseph Mitchell; Paul Jennings Osbourne, carnival man, and his wife, Edna; Walter Hollis English, carnival man; Raymond Wesley Parker, carnival man, serving time at Aiken, S. C., and Charles Wynn Lamar.

KELLY DESCRIBES CIVILIAN DEFENSE PROGRESS IN CITY

Future Plans Also Heard in W-G-N Talk.

Mayor Kelly told the radio audience of W-G-N last night what has been done for Chicago's civilian defense and what will be done.

The mayor, as civilian defense coordinator for the Chicago metropolitan area, devoted his discussion to a summary of the activities of his office during the last few months.

"Business men—labor leaders—public officials—people from all walks of life—have signed up to be of service," Mayor Kelly said.

Engineers Study Program.

"Right now engineers are working on technical problems, matters pertaining to the protection of our utilities, and planning necessary camouflage and blackout precautions."

He said medical stations have been set up and fully equipped for any emergency; the police department has been augmented by thousands of members of the American Legion.

Retired firemen and civilians capable of this type of work, such as janitors and engineers of building and industry, have augmented the fire department and will be fire watchers.

Wardens have been appointed from the ranks of labor in the various industrial plants to guard against sabotage; and women have organized into many units, Mayor Kelly said.

Elect Bloc's Captains.

"But the heart of all this organization," he continued, "is in the individual block. An organizer is selected for each block and he calls an election—all the people in that block should attend—for the purpose of electing a block captain.

"This captain in turn will recommend some 20 or 25 persons living in his block who appear to be most suited for the necessary jobs. When fully organized we will have a home military organization—an army of from 500,000 to

SCIENCE HOPEFUL AS IT ATTACKS RUBBER SCARCITY

Two Year Supply on Hand, Says Manufacturer.

Rationers Meet Today

Tire rationing administrators from 48 states and regional directors of the Office of Price Administration will meet today in the Stevens hotel to discuss present problems and future plans for further rationing. Frank Bane, director of field operations for the OPA, will come from Washington to preside at the meeting. A message received from Washington by Henry Pope Jr., Illinois tire rationing administrator, informed him of the meeting and said that "much additional rationing action" would be taken shortly. The meeting is also expected to discuss the place of the recapping and retreading processes for tires in the defense program.

BY HAL FOUST.

American science and industry are straining their traditional ingenuity to preserve automobile transportation, which is an integral part of our social and economic system. Alphabet agency officials in Washington foresee difficulty in providing even enough rubber for the tires of armament workers, but the chemists, mechanics, and inventors are not so pessimistic.

"The best brains in America are working on the problem," George B. Dryden, president of the Chicago rubber company bearing his name, said yesterday. "I don't believe the situation is quite as desperate as it has been portrayed.

Supply Sufficient for Two Years.

"We have about 750,000 tons of crude rubber in stock. We have about 500,000 tons of scrap from which 250,000 tons of reclaimed rubber can be obtained. By economizing, this is enough to meet military and essential civilian needs for two years. Military designs are being modified to cut rubber requirements 25 per cent. New car production is to be halted on Feb. 2. After two years, we should have new sources or substitutes ample for needs."

The biggest program for new tire material is the 400 million dollar expansion of synthetic rubber plants announced two weeks ago by Jesse H. Jones, federal loan administrator, to be in production by the middle of next year with an annual capacity of 400,000 tons, two-thirds of peacetime requirements. Congress is also considering a 10 to 15 million dollar program of cultivating the guayule shrub that will grow rubber in the southwest and in southern California. The plant takes four years to mature.

Experiment with Oil of Corn.

At Peoria the new laboratories of the department of agriculture are experimenting in making synthetic rubber from oil of corn.

"The big chemical companies and the big rubber companies of America are searching diligently for synthetics or substitutes," said the Chicago manufacturer.

Others, principally automotive men, are considering improvisions that might keep America's 28 million motor cars rolling after rubber tires are worn out. Metal and leather are among the materials considered as substitutes.

Oldsters among the motorists will recall lacing a leather boot around a ruptured tire casing. They'll also recall steel studded treads that were fairly satisfactory except on the then rare hard pavement.

Thousands of Ideas Patented.

In the patent office at Washington are thousands of ideas, almost all of them impractical for a society with ample crude rubber imports from the western Pacific. Today, those imports are closed and will remain closed until the Japanese are driven from their recent conquests.

Among these registered ideas are several types of steel casings, tightly meshed plates. Some of these plates are mounted on leather. Some have a leather inner tube. Animal intestines are seen as a possible substitute for leather.

Other patents provide for resilient wheels that would not require pneumatic tires. In some, coil or leaf springs are employed between an inner and an outer rim. In some, the spokes are metal springs.

These ideas don't provide for the luxury performance of the modern automobile. But they are being reviewed for wartime necessity transportation.

LETTERS AFFIRM CALDWELL RULE OF UNION FUNDS

Attorney Francis Heisler said yesterday he had obtained new evidence that Max Caldwell, former czar of local 1248 of the Retail Clerks International Protective association, handled all finances of the local without regard to the opinions of other officers.

Heisler represents a group of rebel members who forced the ouster of Caldwell, a former bootlegger, and sued him and his aids for an accounting of $910,000 allegedly collected from the low paid membership.

The new evidence was in the form of letters written by union officers. These were turned over to Heisler by Attorney Harold Marovitz, counsel for Caldwell. Testimony in the case is being taken by Daniel A. Covelli, master of chancery. So far only $62 of assets of the union have been discovered.

THE QUESTION.

Do you have a tactful way to get back borrowed books?

WHERE ASKED.

Public library.

THE ANSWERS.

Norman E. Abrams, library clerk, 1506 South Lawndale avenue—It's my business to get back borrowed books here, but I can't apply that experience to a personal proposition. Usually I boldly hint by offering the friend another book and then we just exchange. But such a procedure has no end.

Ralph Danenhower, insurance broker, 4240 Clarendon avenue—I've learned some good lessons about lending books to people. If it's a book I value it stays on the shelf because I know how people are about borrowed books. And with less valuable ones I don't embarrass myself to ask for them.

Mrs. John Kneafsey, housewife, 1310 Lunt avenue—Having no library of my own, I don't lend many books. I'm on the borrowing end more often. I borrow books only from very good friends and we never consider it being tactless if they ask for it by phone. It happens often, too.

Marian Rutledge, beauty operator, 6241 Winthrop avenue—I play safe by lending nothing but library books. I get two or three on my card and then if the friend has kept the book too long it doesn't embarrass me to call up and say that the book is due.

Mrs. Carl Johnson, housewife, 4905 Glenwood avenue—I belong to a book club and always get the latest books, so I'm a pretty popular neighbor! When I have to ask for a book I call the guilty party and say that some one else would like to read the book if she's finished.

Albert M. Cox, conductor, 3804 Virginia avenue, Kansas City, Mo.—Is there such a thing as a tactful way of asking for them? If I could get back all the books I've lent I could begin another library. I'd actually rather lose a book than to have to go after it or ask about it.

WAR BOND SALES IN CHICAGO AREA NOW 502 MILLION

The sale of defense bonds thru the Chicago Federal Reserve bank district has passed the half billion dollar mark, it was announced yesterday by Alfred T. Sihler, vice president of the bank. Sales Thursday, the latest available figure, were $7,650,000, bringing the total to $502,426,000 since the campaign started May 1, 1941.

The district includes Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Wisconsin, and part of Michigan and the sales are made thru member banks, savings and loan associations, and corporations. In addition, the Chicago postoffice has sold $22,359,056.25 in bonds and $5,833,533.65 in defense stamps in the same period.

The Western Union Telegraph company joined the securities selling drive yesterday, placing 10 and 25 cent stamps on sale in its 5,000 public offices thruout the country. Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau sent a telegram to A. N. Williams, president of Western Union, saying:

"The opening of all your outlets for stamp sales will be a major contribution to the defense savings effort."

The Morrison hotel announced that its 900 employés have subscribed to $60,000 worth of bonds under the pay roll allotment plan. Leonard Hicks, managing director of the hotel, said salary deductions for the bonds will be made each pay day for 10 months.

The Tribune Public Service offices in Tribune Tower and at 1 South Dearborn street continued with their part in the campaign. The New Italian union of Chicago, a fraternal organization with 1,000 members, bought $3,000 worth of bonds at the Tribune Tower office.

At the 1 South Dearborn office, the Columbia Damen club, a women's organization, bought a $500 bond.

Pupils in the city's 400 public high and elementary schools yesterday bought 750,000 of the 10 cent stamps —a total of $75,000.

THE WAR'S PULL TAKES STRETCH OUT OF GIRDLES

U. S. Board Curtails Use of Crude Rubber.

BY WALTER TROHAN.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Jan. 23.—The war productions board today prohibited the use of crude rubber or latex after Feb. 1 in the manufacture of hundreds of articles which had been considered American necessities of life before the Japanese attacked Pearl Harbor. Latex is the sap of the rubber tree before it has been hardened or treated to put it in shape for shipment.

Women will be called upon to sacrifice the streamlined effect they achieve from girdles and other foundation garments. One official said streamlining may come from enforced dieting as the war goes on. The government has no immediate plans, however, for rationing food.

Use of Reclaimed Rubber Ordered.

Under the WPB order latex curve controlers, rubber golf balls, and rubber erasers gradually will disappear. The order provided that these articles may be made only from reclaimed rubber, which cannot be used satisfactorily in material subject to recurrent stretching, such as girdles.

It was said that a foundation garment of reclaimed rubber would, after being stretched a few times, add to the general contour rather than take away from it.

The effect of the order is to reduce a wide variety of other civilian goods by about 75 per cent below recent annual consumption. Except to fill strictly war orders, use of rubber is restricted to percentages of the average monthly consumption during the 12 months which ended March 31, 1941.

List of Requirements.

The percentages for various articles is as follows:

Miscellaneous rubber goods, 25 per cent. [It is expected this production will be sufficient to cover all orders having high priority, but will not allow any rubber for the production of nonessentials.]

Equipment for printing and publishing, 80 per cent.

Fire and mill hose necessary for civilian defense and the increased industrial activity, 180 per cent.

Hospital and surgical supplies and infant feeding products, 100 per cent.

Consumers' flat goods, such as water bottles and ice bags, 75 per cent.

Shoe cements and quarter lining, 70 per cent.

Industrial protective clothing, 100 per cent.

Firemen's and policemen's clothing, 60 per cent.

Rubber footwear for workmen and for athletic use, 30 per cent.

Waterproof footwear for civilian use, a health requirement, 40 per cent.

Plumbers' supplies, 80 per cent.

Tire repair materials, 100 per cent.

Rates for Latex.

Latex may be consumed for the following purposes and at the following rates:

Industrial belts and belting, 120 per cent.

Surgical and medical equipment, 100 per cent.

Electricians' and industrial gloves [without fabric], 100 per cent.

Express permission must be obtained from the WPB to consume rubber or latex to manufacture tires, casings and tubes of all types.

PRICE CONTROL BILL POSTPONED UNTIL MONDAY

'Trickery' on Arms Act Angers House.

BY WILLARD EDWARDS.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Jan. 23.—Majority Leader John W. McCormack [D., Mass.] tested the mood of the house members today and then decided against bringing up a conference report on the administration's price control bill. The members were angry over what was termed the "trickery" of Chairman Clarence Cannon [D., Mo.], of the house appropriations committee in connection with the 12 billion dollar defense bill.

Rep. McCormack.

McCormack knows from experience that the house, when aroused, is likely to take almost any course of action. He consulted with Republican leaders who agreed that it would be unwise to entrust the price control measure for serious consideration to the legislators at the moment. So action on the report was postponed until Monday.

Leaves Senate Without Work.

This left the senate in a curious position. That body had been in recess, awaiting the house decision. Growing weary, the senators had quit until 11 a. m. tomorrow. When they meet, they will have nothing to consider.

Another consideration entered into the house decision to postpone action. Many eastern members like to take a 5 p. m. train on Friday to their homes for the week-end. Debate on the price control report would have extended past that hour. Either large numbers of statesmen would have left the chamber or the delay would have added to their irritation and influenced their verdict.

Hopes for House Version.

Rep. Jesse P. Wolcott [R., Mich.], a minority conferee who refused to sign the report, said he hoped that the Republican minority, aided by some Democratic support, would be able to insist upon the house version of the measure which provided for an administrative board of review with power to reverse the decisions of Price Administrator Leon Henderson. He expressed hope also that the house would balk at the senate provisions for the licensing of all American business which the house originally had refused to accept. Rep. Charles L. Gifford [R., Mass.], the other minority conferee, was pessimistic.

"The farmers are so delighted with the bill that it will go thru," he asserted.

CURB ON SUGAR CURTAILS SOFT DRINK INDUSTRY

New York, Jan. 23 (AP).—Six of the nation's leading soft drink companies admitted today that the present governmental order limiting sugar consumption by the carbonated beverage industry had curtailed production of their output.

"We're rationing deliveries," one executive said, "and unless the government eases up we're in for a rocky year."

The Coca-Cola company started rationing case deliveries several weeks ago and announced that sales would be reduced about 35 per cent. The Pepsi-Cola company declined to comment, but the Seven Up company, Orange Crush, Mission Dry, and other soft drink concerns agreed that they had revised their production schedules.

"Our Country! In her intercourse with foreign nations may she always be in the right; but our country, right or wrong."
—Stephen Decatur.

THE PHILIPPINE TRAGEDY.

Recent news from the Philippines has been favorable but it cannot be forgotten that our men are outnumbered and outgunned. Little if anything is left of their air support. The Japanese control the surrounding seas and presumably can prevent a steady flow of supplies and reënforcements to Gen. MacArthur.

Armies in far less peril have surrendered without loss of honor, but there has been no talk in the Philippines of surrender. As long as the ammunition holds out, the Japanese will pay for every foot of territory they may succeed in taking.

Military experts the world over have announced that our little force is doomed unless help comes speedily—and they may well be right. Gen. MacArthur and his men can have no illusions about their situation. They must know it is desperate because they know how slim is the chance of bringing up fresh troops and supplies. Nevertheless they are fighting as valiantly as if victory were in plain sight.

It is humiliating to think that these brave men may be beyond reach of our help and that they, like the garrison at Wake, may be abandoned to their bitter fate. The war department set them down in the Philippines without adequate equipment. Thru criminal carelessness at Pearl Harbor the fleet was so heavily damaged that it now appears unable to risk the initiative. The army in the Philippines is the victim of sins of omission and commission that remain unpunished.

For the moment a large part of the American public appears to be almost indifferent to the fate of the battered garrisons at Corregidor and on Luzon. Perhaps there are some in Washington who think that this mood will persist, come what may. If so they are going to get the surprise of their lives.

CANADIAN CONSCRIPTION.

Canada is to hold a referendum on whether troops are to be conscripted for service overseas. The prime minister before the war said that as long as his government was in power there would be no conscription for overseas service. Events make it difficult to maintain this pledge. Hence the referendum.

Canadian volunteers have enthusiastically responded to the call to arms and those sent to Britain are chiefly impatient because of the inaction forced upon them there. The men remaining in the dominion who have been subject to brief training for home defense will realize that the war in the Pacific has altered conditions and that Canada's interests will be best served by coming to grips with the foe.

More than 2,000 of Canada's sons were among the garrison of Hongkong when the fortress fell a month ago. Canada has Hongkong to avenge, as the United States has Pearl Harbor.

MEDICAL COUNSELOR.

THE TRIBUNE'S medical counsel service is entering its fourth year. The report for 1941 by Dr. Irving S. Cutter, health editor of the newspaper, shows that the service during the last year included 11,424 visits, an average of about four during the year for each employé.

The counselor service has followed faithfully its purpose, as announced on Jan. 1, 1930, "to assist employés of THE TRIBUNE and their families in obtaining competent medical care and proper hospital facilities within their ability to pay." The service would not have been established, naturally, if it had not been felt that there was a need for it. Three years' experience has demonstrated it fills that need. Good health is a difficult thing to set down on a balance sheet, but THE TRIBUNE feels that the service has more than repaid its cost to the company.

THE TRIBUNE has always been vigilant against paternalism. The medical counsel service is offered on a purely voluntary basis. It was established because it came to the attention of the company that on too frequent occasions employés suffered from failure to find the right physician for their particular illnesses or, in some rarer cases, were victimized financially or physically by excessive fees or improper diagnosis.

The medical counselor—a physician—does not attend the people who consult him. He assists them in finding competent physicians and in arranging for hospital accommodations if these are required. If the employé is in doubt about the advisability of an operation he may consult the counselor.

The plan as tried at THE TRIBUNE has been a success. It is recommended to other employers who are alert to assist their employés in obtaining benefits as a group which they may find it difficult in obtaining as individuals.

BAILING OUT THE TVA.

Leland Olds, chairman of the Federal Power commission, proposes as a "defense measure" transmission lines linking electric power production pools in New York, Pennsylvania, and New Jersey with the hydroelectric plants of the Tennessee Valley authority, some 400 or 500 miles away.

"What we're attempting to do," said Mr. Olds, "is to balance the electric power so that when the steam generated electric power in the north is low it can be bolstered by hydroelectric power generated by the TVA. When there is a drouth in the Tennessee valley region and hydroelectric power falls off, that supply can be augmented by whatever excess exists in the steam generated electric pools."

There is just enough truth in Mr. Olds' statement to make it capable of deception. There is some surplus of power in the New York-New Jersey-Pennsylvania area. It is not a seasonal surplus, nor is there ever any seasonal shortage in steam power generation. TVA has a power shortage, but transmission of power from Pennsylvania to the neighborhood of Knoxville would be a most expensive way of relieving it, even in normal times. Also, armament orders threaten a power shortage in the Pittsburgh area, which is within range of superpower connections with the eastern seaboard and would be a much more economical consumer of any seaboard power surplus.

Mr. Olds' proposal is not a defense measure. It is a proposal to divert some thousands of tons of copper and steel from defense purposes in order to bail out the reputations of the public power advocates and political engineers. They overloaded the TVA system with customers, neglecting the fact that all hydroelectric systems are an erratic source of power because of natural variations in rainfall.

So far as national defense is concerned, the obvious remedy of the TVA situation is not to transmit additional power to that region at unjustified expense, but to locate future defense plants where there is a dependable power supply.

SECRETARY WICKARD'S SUGAR SHORTAGE.

A housewife, one of a number who have addressed the Voice of the People on the same topic, recently complained in that column that when she went to buy five pounds of sugar at her grocer's she was told that she could not have it unless she bought at least a dollar's worth of other merchandise. By her account she was not trying to hoard sugar. In fact, it was the first she had tried to buy since Pearl Harbor.

Her grocer can hardly be blamed. His own sugar supply is being restricted and the requirement that other purchases be made is probably as sensible a device as any to confine sugar sales to regular customers and prevent senseless hoarding.

The cause of sugar hoarding can be traced directly to Washington, to public utterances of Secretary of Agriculture Wickard, and to the interpretation placed on those utterances by some irresponsible radio commentators.

Mr. Wickard is doubly guilty. Not only has he started a sugar panic by his irresponsible talk about the United States undertaking to feed nearly every one else in the world but any shortage that does exist is traceable largely to his own department's curtailment of sugar production, misnamed economic planning.

Inquiry in Washington discloses the following facts about the curtailment of the nation's sugar supply:

Last year the department of agriculture, over protests of domestic beet sugar producers, ordered a curtailment of sugar beet acreage of from 17 to 20 per cent.

Puerto Rico has on hand and waiting to be ground more sugar cane than it will be permitted to process under the present production quota set by the department. In addition, cane that would have yielded 300,000 tons of sugar was left to rot in Puerto Rican fields because the production was forbidden.

Sugar producers predicted an increase in demand for their product a year ago and urged—without success—that production quotas be raised to levels to permit maximum production.

That is the picture on the production side. It is clear that if any shortage of sugar occurs it will be because of the New Deal's economic tinkering.

Mr. Wickard bases his talk of a shortage on two factors. One is the increased demand for sugar abroad, the other the denial, because of the war, of the normal sugar imports from the Philippines and Hawaii. In neither case does he appear to be on wholly sound ground.

The war has closed more markets for western hemisphere sugar than it has opened. There is the further difficulty of shipping to European markets. Military enterprises will naturally have a priority on shipping. When those requirements are taken care of it is doubtful whether there will be enough boats to take to Europe a much larger tonnage of sugar than is normally shipped out of the Caribbean even if customers could be found for it on the other side of the Atlantic.

Of our two Pacific sources of sugar, the Philippines are assuredly cut off for the present; but it seems nonsensical to maintain that we cannot get a large quantity—and probably our normal shipments—out of Hawaii. Enormous quantities of military equipment presumably are being shipped and will be shipped in the future to Hawaii, which obviously will be the first waystation on any path to the battles in the western Pacific. Certainly it is not expected that those ships are going to return to this country empty. Sugar is the most important cargo they can get in Hawaii for the return journey.

The department of agriculture burocrats, anxious to hold their jobs, are making a great cry about their activities being essential to the war effort. Agricultural production is essential to the war effort, but it is equally essential that the department be purged of the bungling theorists who are preventing that production.

NEW YORK'S TYRANNY.

Under the pretense of air raid precautions a dictatorship has been established in New York City such as never has been dreamed of on this continent. Fiorello La Guardia, the part time mayor, has recruited a political force of 235,000 air raid wardens. Under an ordinance La Guardia pushed thru his city council any one may be fined $500 and imprisoned for six months for disobeying the orders of these henchmen. The evidence to be submitted in court would be the warden's say-so.

La Guardia has consistently displayed a disposition toward arbitrary action. His private army in tin hats can be expected to take its color from him. There is no legal curb on the conduct of the wardens in pushing the citizenry around, or insulting and molesting women. Before it is all over recourse to habeas corpus may prove increasingly necessary. If, under the guise of emergency, that goes, too, there will be not a single protection for the citizen from the will of the mayor. New York is now almost as completely under the tyrant's heel as were Frenchmen in the days of the letter of cachet.

TIN CANS IN WAR.

[St. Louis Post-Dispatch.]

From three to four billion tin cans go to litter America's vacant lots and swell its dump heaps each year. In view of the impending tin shortage, because the war has cut off access to the major source in British Malaya, many persons have suggested a great drive to gather all these cans and thereby solve the problem.

It is not so simple, however. In the first place, so-called tin cans contain only 1½ per cent of tin; the remainder is low grade steel and solder. [Of course, scrap steel is badly needed, too.] In the second place, no successful method of processing the cans at an economically feasible cost has been developed.

Now a scientist and an engineer of Los Angeles announce they have discovered a method, and submit the profitable operations of their small salvage plant as evidence. They hope for considerable expansion and have a promise of RFC financing if large scale operation proves practical. Just a few days ago the conservation division of OPM announced it would soon begin detinning experiments in the hope of finding a successful process. Perhaps the Los Angeles men have the answer.

Of course, these steps are being taken rather late in the day. But the humble tin can may yet play a part in winning the war.

MR. PEPYS MEETS DR. PEPYS.

24th Jan.—Went to my club the other night to a dinner in honor of Dr. Pepys, who is one of my competitors in the diary racket, and writes about his gaddings in a medical journal and at the end of the year puts all his jottings into a book and sends it to me for a Christmas card. His real name is Dr. Fishbein, known from one side of the country to the other as the merriest doctor who ever made a speech.

To honor Dr. Pepys, who is a keen student of food follies, we partook of the following dishes: Canapé homard Americain en petit casserole, consommé Julienne, supreme of chicken or sliced tenderloin, sauce Bordelaise; lettuce with sliced grapefruit, and ice cream with strawberry sauce au kirsch. Then we asked him to stand up and tell us about the strange things people eat to grow thin, or to make their hair curl.

The good doctor was nothing loath, for he had expected something of the sort, and he talked for an hour or more, faster than a radio announcer at a football game and funnier than "Panama Hattie." We laughed ourselves into stitches at his stories about the quacks and charlatans who have gulled the American people, especially women, into strange ways of taking nourishment, and when he had finished the assembled sophisticates agreed they had been missing much by preferring night clubs to lectures. Verily, this Dr. is a credit to the great clan of Pepys.

Talked with another doctor at the dinner and he has a method for improving digestion that should be called to the attention of gourmands. After heavy eating and drinking, said this learned physician, when every one feels sodden and the party grows dull, the thing to do is to stretch out flat on the floor. He insists on a hard floor, for he is opposed to lounges and cushions. Lie there, gazing at the ceiling, completely relaxed, and let no word be spoken for ten minutes. Then rise and drink a cup of black coffee. He is in dead earnest about this and says it works wonders, giving every one a fresh start.

So if you happen to find Mr. Pepys stretched out on the floor after a big dinner, do not think he has been overcome. Presently he will spring up and become the life of the party.

BLUE AND GRAY.

The wavering lines grow less and less each year.
Soon not one of them will march this way
On proud, unsteady feet; not one to wear
His uniform upon Memorial day.
Thin lines, but gloriously rich with dreams—
I think I see them full of marching men
Whose swords and bayonets reflect the gleams
Of the May sun. And they will tramp again,
Renewed in sons and sons' sons, carrying
The courage and the ideals of the past.
They drank of valor from a noble spring
And buried animosity at last.
Always when drums and flutes sound on the air
The Blue and Gray will still be marching there.

When Little Boys Were Fauntleroys.

I was such a sweet baby! And if I hear any snickers I'll haul out a coupla photographs to prove it. Being the first grandchild on either side, I was the fair-haired darling and reigned supreme. My mother was a frontier gal who had been a crack shot and ridden with a pack outfit all the way from Denver to Yellowstone shortly after it was made the first national park in 1872. But when I came along she went haywire. When I started to school I had never been allowed outside our yard nor played with other children, and I still wore long yellow curls. Inside of two days they were letting me out ten minutes early so I could reach our front gate ahead of the ravening pack that wanted to work on me.

The best picture was when I was four, and they took me to Springfield for the state fair. I was to be presented to Gov. Altgeld as the future President from Schuyler county. We took rooms in a select home south of the square. On the big day Dad had hired a carriage and mother had spent two hours curling my golden locks, polishing my patent leather slippers with the rhinestone buckles, and decking me out in my Lord Fauntleroy velvet suit. I had a big Irish lace collar and lace at my cuffs. About the time the carriage came, mother wasn't quite into her armor and I headed for the little building in the back yard—alone. It seems that in Springfield in those days they put their dishwater and garbage into a swill barrel sunk in the ground alongside the back walk. When I fell in it, by standing on tiptoe I could just barely get my mouth out to scream bloody murder. Poor mother!

TO THE BARD OF AYR.

(Robert Burns, born Jan. 25, 1759.)

When I aspire to walk with queens and kings
I pass an hour with Shakespeare's royal tome,
And when on high Olympus I would roam
Staid Milton brings his lyre and grandly sings;
When I am spent amid the frets and stings
Of life, the saintly Wordsworth lends his balm,
And wearying of his persistent calm
I list to Shelley's rapt imaginings;
But when romance recalls to youthful ecstasy,
And in my heart I nurse an oldtime dream,
I bid farewell to all high-measured poetry
And walk with you, loved Bard, by Afton's stream;
There you and I and your dear Highland Mary
Hold converse sweet, while battling nations tarry.

BE PATIENT WITH A SPRAIN.

INJURIES to muscles and tendons are common. In fact, they are far more frequent than many of us realize. Physicians would much prefer to take care of a broken ankle than one that has been sprained because the patient who encounters a fracture makes up his mind that he must allow plenty of time for repair. With a so-called minor episode — the muscle fibers may have been torn apart, tendons severed, or ligaments ruptured. All in all, a far more disabling situation may be presented than when an actual break has occurred.

We can compare a muscle to a bundle of several thousand strands of fine thread. Let this cable be subjected to a sudden strain, one to which it is not accustomed, and a hundred or more of the filaments may snap. Such an "accident" is followed always by some bleeding into the structure itself. In consequence, pain and swelling will appear. In addition there will be a substantial amount of rigidity because the tissues will do everything they can to protect themselves against movement.

Should a muscle be called upon to contract, a corresponding pull will be exerted upon the damaged fibers.

Let us assume that an X-ray has been taken and that no impairment of the skeleton has been disclosed. All too often the patient is quite unable to understand why he cannot get about within a few days. Furthermore, let him undertake even mild exercise before the area heals and he may suffer a recurrence which will prolong his disability.

The most important procedure at the outset is to prevent the tearing of more of the fine strings. This demands complete immobilization for at least a week, followed by massage and gentle manipulation. Inactivity must then be enforced for an additional week.

The rule that exercise must not be permitted until all tenderness has completely disappeared, should be observed strictly. Depending upon the site and the extent of the damage this will vary from a total period of three weeks to two months. If the supports of the back have been disturbed the interval may be lengthened.

Should a tendon be severed it may be necessary to suture the parts promptly. For example, the guy rope [tendo Achillis] which connects some of the leg pulleys to the heel constitutes a well known type of mishap. After the acute pain has subsided the patient is usually able to walk about but he soon realizes that he is obliged to do so with the foot flat on the ground. In other words, he cannot raise the heel.

Symptoms include swelling and the appearance of a small lump above the upper portion of the heel bone. The sooner the dressmaking job is done the better. Thereafter, the foot and the ankle should be fixed in a plaster cast and a repair period of four weeks allowed. Only after six weeks should an attempt at walking be made.

We cannot see exactly what has happened when muscles, ligaments, or tendons are disturbed. X-ray films afford us no information. On the other hand, discomfort and loss of function tell us in no uncertain terms that the soft tissues are "out of commission." Fortunately, few of these accidents result in the slightest permanent handicap. But careful early treatment means more rapid recovery.

ON EAST AND WEST.

Chicago, Jan. 22.—With regard to the problem of names which today's editorial, "East Is West," poses, you do well to eschew first of all such terms as "orient" "occident," "Levant," etc., less because they envision the rising or setting sun than that it is a rising or setting sun over a flat earth, and the concept of a flat earth is implicit in too much of our thinking even at this late date.

Rome conceived of herself as at the beginning and center of things. From Rome everything was either "trans," or "cis"; Rome knew one "med," or "mid"—the Mediterranean sea.

"Trans" meant to the Roman as it does to us "across," "over," "beyond," or "on the other side of"; "cis," less familiar to us, meant "on this side of." It is these two good, clear words, "trans" and "mid," rightly applied, that put America clearly in today's world.

For America there is a mid-Atlantic, and there is a mid-Pacific; a trans-Atlantic, and a trans-Pacific; there is a Mediterranean sea, east and west, and there is a trans-Mediterrania, just as there is emerging a real trans-Caucasia of which perhaps few statesmen are as yet consciously aware. These very few and simple designations, coupled with the definitive names of continents and nations, and such entities as China, India, etc., appear to put an American citizen in perspective with his world.

The world is already adjusting its thought to the concept that the "far east" has become merely America's trans-Pacific—Dutch, British, Portuguese, Chinese, Filipino, Australia, all alike—for otherwise, all ground will be cut out from under the white man's foot beyond the mid-Pacific! SCRAP.

Chicago, Jan. 21.—I read with great interest your recent editorial on the matter of conservation of junk.

It strikes me that before efforts are made to ask our civilian population to assemble a piece of junk here and a piece of junk there, a concentrated effort should be made to have large accumulations of junk turned over by individuals and companies to the government for its use.

I specifically refer to the elevated spur on the south end of Wacker drive, which is of no use to any one and has been abandoned for many years and contains thousands of tons of steel.

I refer to many spots in Chicago where abandoned street car rails still remain in the streets unremoved, which should be removed and turned over to the government.

Other great sources of junk which should be immediately seized upon are the vast stores of automobile junk cars which can be seen out of every railroad window in practically every small town.

There seems to be little reason to bother a housewife for an old pot or pan when these vast stores of junk are readily available. BENJAMIN SAMUELS.

NEGRO SOLDIERS' WIVES.

Chicago, Jan. 21.—I am one of the young Negro wives who will be left to take care of ourselves when our husbands are inducted into the army. We have been married seven years and have made many sacrifices to make our home complete. This year we would have been able to breathe a little easier.

Every wife wants her husband to do his part, but it worries the men when they think of our welfare after they are gone. Our husbands have never made more than a living wage and we have fought a war of existence ever since we have been married. Now we would feel a lot better if jobs which pay a living wage were opened to us. Laws have been passed to meet other emergencies, so why can't one be passed to this effect?

PLANE PRODUCTION.

Evanston, Ill., Jan. 22.—What is the real, honest-to-goodness situation regarding our plane production? We have heard and read so many statements to the effect that planes and tanks were issuing from our factories in a constant stream, etc., but subsequent facts seem to belie these assurance. Have we really got down to business? Are our factories on a three shift, 24 hour, seven day basis? And are our planes being hastened to the front in decent numbers? We have fooled around so long, playing at the ghastly game, that it would provide some little comfort to know, if true, that at long last we were hitting on all 4 or 8 or 16. INQUIRER.

COST PLUS.

Chicago, Jan. 22.—The editorial, "The Cost of Ships," in THE TRIBUNE of Jan. 21 recalls similar waste, extravagance, and inefficiency prevailing during World War I.

At the earlier period, too, the system of awarding war contracts on a cost plus fee basis opened the doors to extravagance.

Unfortunately this method was not and could not be confined to war contracts, but quickly caused prices in all consumer goods to skyrocket.

I fear that if the uneconomic and wasteful system of awarding war contracts on the cost plus basis is continued not only will the taxpayers' money be squandered, but ere long the consumer will be faced with a similar situation as prevailed during and after World War I.

The result is as inevitable in 1942 as it was in 1917-'18: A revival of the vicious circle of inflation and an ever rising cost of living. SOL WESTERFELD.

SOILED FLAGS.

Chicago, Jan. 20.—I was shocked and surprised at the appearance of some American flags displayed on State street buildings. I can understand, what with subway building and so on, that Chicago's loop is probably dirtier now than ever before, but I still cannot see that this should be any reason for displaying a soiled and begrimed symbol of our great nation. According to the war department, "When the flag is in such condition that it is no longer a fit emblem for display it should be privately burned."

2. The conservator can handle the probate estate, if that is what you mean to ask.

COUNTY PAY ROLL ECONOMY PLANS SPIKED BY JUDGES

Spurn Survey Report and Add 80 Employes.

BY LAURENCE 'BURD.

Judges of the Circuit court yesterday set the number of regular employés in the 13 county fee offices for this year at 1,902, an increase of 80 regular jobs and the highest total since 1926.

The increase, which included 100 additional highway police for Sheriff Thomas J. O'Brien, was authorized despite recommendations to the judges by a special survey staff that nearly 200 employés in the 13 county fee offices be dropped at a saving of approximately $500,000. The survey was conducted by a technical staff working under authority of the county board.

The judges were also warned last month by Newton Farr, president of the Civic federation, that the county is faced with a 1942 budget deficit of 3½ million dollars and that failure to reduce pay rolls might bring payless pay days.

Treasurer's Staff Cut.

These warnings fell on deaf ears, except in the case of the treasurer's office, where the judges followed the survey group's suggestions by cutting 69 employés from the extra, or overtime, roll at a saving of $103,000 for this year.

No other cuts suggested by the efficiency staff were adopted by the judges. They approved in full the report of the three judge committee on help, which had studied the efficiency proposals. The three judges are Robert J. Dunne, committee chairman; John Prystalski, chief justice of the Circuit court, and Julius H. Miner.

Yesterday's meeting was held in Judge Prystalski's chambers in the County building. The judges, however, refused to release their report to newspaper men until they had all left the building.

Prystalski Defends Stand.

Judge Prystalski, reached at home, declared that none of the cuts proposed by the efficiency staff, except in the treasurer's office, were justified, and said 100 more police are needed for the sheriff because of the war. He recalled that Sheriff O'Brien had requested 200 extra police.

Prystalski said the efficiency survey committee, which supervised the technical staff's work, had not subscribed to all the staff proposals for economies, and hence the judges were not overriding the committee.

A member of the survey committee explained, however, that most of the staff reports were passed on to the judges without recommendation because it was thought the judges were more familiar than the committee with the detailed situation.

The staff had proposed the slashing of 77 jobs to save $182,000 in the offices of the five clerks of courts—County, Circuit, Superior, Criminal, and Probate. It had also suggested a cut of 100 jobs at a saving of $200,000, out of the sheriff's 501 employès, exclusive of police.

Other Savings Refused.

The staff report on the coroner's office, proposed annual savings of $51,097, including the dropping of six employés. In the recorder's office, the survey committee had indorsed the staff proposal to cut 27 pay rollers, saving $30,850, and suggested an even further cut might be made.

The judges took cognizance of the fact that 33 of the 167 employés in the Juvenile court will be dropped thru transfer of the mothers' pension division to state and federal control, but made up for most of this automatic drop by adding 22 employés in other divisions of the court.

Judge Harry M. Fisher, who attended yesterday's meeting, defended the pay roll increase. He declared the courts and other fee offices are undermanned and said the argument that the county is in a sad financial plight has been worn out in the last 20 years.

DOUGLAS TALKS TO BACKERS ON POST-WAR AIMS

Ald. Paul H. Douglas [5th] spoke last night before 100 members of the Paul H. Douglas for senator committee in Shotwell hall, 55th street and Blackstone avenue. Douglas told his supporters he would campaign for the Democratic nomination for United States senator "until some better man comes along."

Edwin L. Embree of the Rosenwald Foundation, chairman of the meeting, declared that Illinois should have a senator able to look beyond the boundaries of the city and state.

Douglas said that after the last war an "isolationist minority" kept the United States out of the League of Nations. After this war, he declared, there must be a "pooling of force to deter potential aggressors" or World war III. would follow World war II. The United States, he said, must take part in a world organization of some kind.

BRANDON URGES STUDY TO AVERT WAR CRIME RISE

Only thru study of the factors that caused an upswing of crime during and after the last war can a similar upswing be prevented this time, Rodney H. Brandon, state welfare director, said yesterday. He spoke before representatives of more than 100 social agencies who met in the Medical School building, 1853 Polk street.

The state's prison population soared for 550 for each million of population in 1920 to 1,100 in 1930, Brandon said. The peak of 1,350 for each million was reached in 1935. After that the prison population started to decline. The social workers met at the request of Dr. Paul L. Schroeder, state criminologist, to form a committee to present a coördination plan of their work to the state council of defense.

City Council Notes

The city council yesterday unanimously passed an ordinance adopting the new federal daylight saving law for Chicago. The ordinance specified that the federal law supersedes the old city ordinance which provides for daylight saving from the last Sunday in April to the last Sunday in October. The new ordinance provides that in the event the federal law is repealed the former city ordinance will be in effect.

An ordinance intended to put teeth in rent control powers of a special council committee on rents and prices was submitted to the council by Ald. Arthur G. Lindell [9], chairman of the committee.

An ordinance which would permit any tavern, whether or not it served food, to purchase for $350 per half year a special permit license to stay open after regular closing hours was introduced at the council meeting by Ald. Thomas P. Keane [31st]. Such licenses would authorize staying open until 4 a. m. on week days and 5 a. m. on Sundays.

Mayor Kelly notified the council that he has promoted Anthony J. Mullaney, deputy chief fire marshal, to the position of chief fire marshal. The city council confirmed the mayor's appointment of George J. Klupar as commissioner of the Chicago Relief administration, effective Feb. 1. Klupar will succeed Leo M. Lyons, who has resigned to become executive director of St. Luke's hospital.

An ordinance, based upon a recommendation from the Chicago Association of Commerce, which would permit the construction of houses in defense areas meeting the minimum Federal Housing administration requirements instead of the city building code was submitted to the council by Ald. Arthur G. Lindell [9th].

The council passed the 1942 city and school board tax levy ordinances. The city ordinance authorized a levy totaling $72,989,490. The school levy totaled $69,448,844. The council also authorized the issuance and sale of tax anticipation warrants against the levies.

VOTE TO REMOVE PRISON MOTIF FROM SHERIDAN

Committee Is Sold on Homey Atmosphere.

BY CHARLES LEAVELLE.

Sweeping changes were authorized yesterday in specifications for the second unit of the Sheridan, Ill., branch of the Illinois State Training School for Boys. The first unit of the Sheridan branch, virtually completed but unoccupied, is a model prison designed to restrain incorrigibles sent there from the main school near St. Charles.

Thomas P. Gunning.

The radical revision was voted here yesterday by a subcommittee of the legislative commission, headed by State Sen. Thomas P. Gunning [R., Princeton], which supervised construction of the first building. It eliminates cells, gun turrets, bullet-proof glass, and the protected visiting room.

Rooms to Be Homey.

Doors in the new building will be lighter. The retaining bars will be thinner. Sixty cells provided in plans drawn by the state architect on orders of the original Gunning commission, will give way to eight homey bedrooms, each of which will accommodate six to eight of the young hoodlums who are to be sent there.

The changes that were adopted by the subcommittee were virtually dictated by Prof. Harrison Dobbs of the University of Chicago.

Dobbs, who is author of the psychiatric, sociological treatment plan inaugurated in St. Charles last Nov. 1, was not a member of the subcommittee. He sat with it, however, and over the coffee cups in the La Salle hotel made his recommendations, which were embodied in a motion passed unanimously.

Gunning Recalls Murders.

Members of the group are Sen. Gunning, chairman; Rep. Leon M. Schuler [D., Peoria], Sen. John J. Parish [D., Centralia], Russell Whitman, Chicago attorney; Miss Martha Connole, attorney, East St. Louis, and Judge Francis Vonachen, Peoria. The committee acted after a morning session, during which there were determined protests against the change.

Sen. Gunning listed some of the murders and other outrages by escaping St. Charles inmates and parolees that kept the Fox river valley in a state of terror for two years. He mentioned the murders of two women.

"If you could have seen the mutilated body of that woman," he said, speaking of one of the victims, "you would think it time to protect the public from these boys rather than protect the boys from the public."

Gun Turrets Must Go.

"I, too, am interested in protecting the public," said Dobbs. "But you don't do it by keeping the boys in such an institution."

The morning session began with Rodney H. Brandon, state director of welfare, outlining a plan whereby only one side of the new unit would be built as bedrooms for the best behave incorrigibles. This, said Dobbs, did not go far enough. He mentioned specifically the gun turrets that command the cell tiers in the first unit. These, he said, must go.

"I am not so sure that turrets should go," said Miss Connole. "Call them something else, but have them there."

"Those turrets would destroy the value of the institution," Dobbs rejoined.

At this point a member of the commission suggested that if the new structure was to be denatured, it might as well be built at the main school, 50 miles away. Russell W. Ballard, managing officer of St. Charles since Nov. 1, said it was difficult to say which boys should be sent to Sheridan.

He has only 15 in mind now, he continued, adding that a boy who last week slugged a housemother and escaped was not among the 15 he had marked for Sheridan. He added that the killers Bernard Sawicki [executed in Cook county last week] and Richard Wesolik, slayer of a Woodstock farm woman last summer, had had excellent records when in St. Charles.

Judge Frank H. Bicek of the Cook county Juvenile court spoke strongly against the proposed changes.

"The uses of Sheridan were settled upon by the old commission," he said. "I am surprised at Mr. Ballard's statement he can pick only 15 out of 650 boys who should go there.

Leave Without Fear.

"These boys run away because they know nothing will happen," said Judge Bicek. "Let them know that a guard will be right behind them with a ball bat or a rifle and they will stop running away."

At the time the committee was in session Stanley Lockwood, 16 years old, an inmate of the school, escaped from a guard in the Illinois Eye and Ear Infirmary, 904 West Adams street, where he had been taken for treatment. Albert Traschel, 16, of Chicago, who fled Thursday, was caught by Wheaton police a few hours earlier. Ten boys have escaped this month and eight have been recaptured.

WOMAN DOCTOR LOSES LICENSE AFTER SCANDAL

Josephine Gabler Linked to Abortion Ring.

Dr. Josephine Gabler, recently involved in an abortion scandal out of which grew a murder and a life sentence for the policeman who did the killing, was barred yesterday from further practice of medicine in Illinois. Her license was revoked after a hearing before the medical committee of the state department of registration and education. She was charged with being associated with and lending the use of her name to Mrs. Ada Martin, who faces a trial for conspiracy to commit abortions.

Last April Policeman Daniel Moriarity shot and killed Mrs. Martin's daughter, Ada Jane. Moriarity said he had intended to kill Mrs. Martin and confessed that he had been a fixer for her in an abortion ring.

Admits Selling Practice.

Dr. Gabler admitted she sold her loop medical practice to Mrs. Martin. She admitted also that both Mrs. Martin and her daughter were her employés prior to the sale of the practice, but she maintained she knew nothing about Mrs. Martin heading an abortion ring.

The medical committee also took up the case of Drs. Chester C. Coates, Earl V. Bishop, and Robert Ambrose Elliott, who conducted and operated the Chicago Medical institute at 202 South State street. Attorney Emerson C. Whitney represented Director Frank G. Thompson of the state department in the hearing.

The physicians are charged with "professional association with, or lending one's name to, another for the illegal practice by another or the treatment of human ailments as a business. . . ." The alleged illegal practitioner in their case was Antichi, who faces a charge in the County court of practicing without a license.

Inspectors A. J. Meadel and Arthur W. Nimmer testified that Dr. Coates was the sole owner of the institute but that Roy F. Antichi, "business manager," treated Inspector Meadel, giving him "shots for a cold" and selling him medicine and pills. Antichi is not a licensed physician.

Inspector Describes Treatment.

"We received a telephone complaint about Antichi," Meadel said. "That was last July 16. I called the institute by phone. Antichi told me to come over. He met me in the reception room.

"I told him I had a pain in my neck and shoulder. I called him 'Dr.' Antichi. He didn't correct me. He said, 'I can treat you.' We went into a little room and while I was stripping to the waist he asked me if I'd seen my family physician.

"He put me before a machine and said, 'I can see you've got a congestion there.' He said I'd need a couple of weeks' treatment at $7 a week. He asked me what I could pay and I said $5 that day. Then he laid me on a table and gave me the shots. He put the hypodermic into my arm, inserting the needle in the vein above the elbow.

"After that he took me into another room and put the infra-red rays on me. He kept the heat on my neck and shoulders for about 10 minutes. While I lay there on my stomach he came in and asked me, 'Is it hot?' I told him it was pretty warm.

Meets Dr. Bishop.

"When he took me into the third room I met Dr. Bishop. [Meadel identified the doctor sitting in the hearing room.] Dr. Bishop ran the glass tube with electricity flowing thru it over my neck and shoulders for about 10 minutes more. Then I paid the money and left."

Under questioning by Attorney Harry S. Ditchburne, defense counsel, Antichi denied he treated the inspector or punctured his arm with a hypodermic to give him "shots." He said it was Dr. Bishop who treated the inspector.

Dr. Coates, who has an office at 415 Lexington avenue, New York, said he opened the institute, intending to come here and practice. He was licensed in Chicago 40 years ago, he said, but has not practiced here for 18 years. He insisted he was sole owner of the institute, but admitted that Antichi had full control of the finances, signing all checks, keeping all accounts, depositing all funds.

Doctors Tell of Work.

Dr. Bishop, who said he lives at 4010 Clarendon avenue, admitted he was employed at the institute for $50 a week.

"That's what it was at first," he said. "Later it was raised to $60."

Dr. Elliott, now connected with another medical institution, said he was employed by Dr. Coates, who talked to him by telephone from New York. His salary was $50 a week as a full time doctor for the institute, he said.

All three doctors and Antichi said they used only the name of the institute in their dealings, but the bank account was in Antichi's name and he signed his own name, without that of the institute, to all checks.

"But the doctors — Bishop and Elliott—didn't like to be paid in checks," Antichi said. "I always paid them in cash."

The three doctors were cited as a result of a recent exposé of the institute in THE TRIBUNE.

Other officers elected are: Charles J. Retterer, chief rabban; Fred B. Swanson, assistant rabban; Claude H. Hayward, high priest and prophet; Karl R. Templeton, oriental guide; John B. Morgan, captain of the guard; Arthur H. Vincent, treasurer, and Norman J. Kissick, recorder.

KEESHIN, BORELLI ACCUSED IN SUIT FOR HALF MILLION

Five Employes Charge 'Wanton' Assaults.

A suit asking damages of half a million dollars was filed in Circuit court yesterday against John L. Keeshin, wealthy trucking operator, and Bruce [Bud] Borelli, son of Municipal Judge Francis Borelli. The suit was filed by the firm of Hectman, Winston and Penn in behalf of five employés of the Keeshin Motor Express company.

The five plaintiffs are Edward S. Mitchell, 763 North Aberdeen street; Nick Wassell, 1248 South Washtenaw avenue; John Milich, 2224 Medill avenue, and Alfred Bishop and James Malizzio. All charge they were assaulted Nov. 25 or within 10 days after that date at the instigation of Keeshin.

Charge Wanton Attacks.

Borelli and others, the suit says, committed the actual assaults "wantonly and wilfully and without right or provocation," beating the plaintiffs with clubs, cudgels, and fists.

Attorney Harve R. Hectman said the plaintiffs all were members of an independent union of Keeshin workers attempting to negotiate for a wage increase, and that Mitchell and Milich were members of the negotiating committee. The assaults occurred as the men left the Keeshin plant at 221 West Roosevelt road, Hectman said.

Hectman asserted the plaintiffs were assaulted individually by three or four men, and that Borelli always was present. Bishop, Hectman said, was beaten so severely about the head that he became deaf and has remained so. Hectman said the alleged victims were prepared to prove their allegations before a jury.

Suit Contains Malice Count.

The suit contains a malice count, which means that if there is a judgment against Keeshin and Borelli they can be sent to jail for failure to satisfy it. The plaintiffs ask damages of $100,000 each. All five of the plaintiffs appeared before the grand jury which recently returned indictments against Keeshin and Borelli, and four other employés of the Keeshin firm.

Keeshin appeared yesterday before Chief Justice Robert J. Dunne of the Criminal court on the indictments, which charge assault to commit mayhem and conspiracy in the slugging Jan. 6 of John Gottlieb, a business rival of Keeshin, and the sluggings of five Keeshin employés. Keeshin made bond of $10,500 and the case was continued to Feb. 2. The other defendants were not in court and are at liberty under habeas corpus bonds.

POSTAL ROMEO GETS 18 MONTHS FOR EXTORTION

Says He Will Expose Marriage Clubs.

E. Shirley Ream, postoffice Romeo, ambassador of love, and matrimonial scientist, was allowed 18 months yesterday to complete his new book exposing what he terms the "rottenness" of lonely hearts correspondence clubs. Under the terms of the arrangement specified by Judge Charles E. Woodward of the federal District court the time will be passed in a federal penitentiary.

E. Shirley Ream.

Pale and nervous, the 63 year old "scientist" who writes Ph.D. after his name and claims to have been a visiting professor at the University of Michigan, stood in court and wrung his hands while his attorney, Joseph C. Webb, admitted the charges of extortion and mail fraud against him and pleaded for probation.

Ream was accused of writing suggestive letters to women, receiving compromising letters in reply, and then trying to extort money under threat of exposure.

Calls Him a Scientist.

"This man is a scientist and a scholar," said Webb. "We admit he entered into correspondence with several women, but his purpose was to gather information to expose the methods of matrimonial agencies. He was about to write a book when he was arrested. He's an authority and is listed in 'Who's Who.'" [The latest edition of "Who's Who" does not list Ream.]

John Looby, assistant United States attorney, outlined the government's case against Ream. He said Ream had attempted to extort money from many women whose names and addresses he had obtained from correspondence clubs.

Most of Ream's victims, he said, were school teachers and secretaries whom Ream had threatened to expose to their employers if they did not pay him money.

Ardent Lover's Style.

Some of Ream's letters seized by postal inspectors are models of the ardent lover's style. In one to a Richmond, Va., school teacher, he wrote: "I admire and adore you. I want you and feel I have to have you. . . . I want to possess you wholly as I have told you, and I am so ready for you this moment I can hardly wait."

The tone of his last letter was far different: "I have all your letters assembled and dated and all the preserved pictures with them in a package addressed and ready to send express to a certain school office if I do not hear from you promptly."

FIVE OF 'FRIDAY NIGHT GANG' THRILL BANDITS SENTENCED TO PRISON

Five young gunmen who said they turned to banditry for a thrill and whose wild west style terrorized tavern patrons in more than 25 holdups were sent to the penitentiary yesterday by Judge Julius H. Miner in Criminal court. The group was known as the "Friday Night Gang" because of their habit of staging holdups on that night. They all pleaded guilty.

Those sentenced and the terms fixed by the court are: John Karshall, 19, of 2002 South Des Plaines street, four to six years; George Buncak, 21, of 2012 South Des Plaines street, three to five years; his brother, Steve, 21, two to five years; George Eral, 19, of 1633 South 57th court, Cicero, five to seven years; and Adolph Sinkuis, 17, of 1930 South Jefferson street, one to three years.

A sixth member who quit the gang after going out on two holdups was granted probation for three years, but Judge Miner ordered him to spend the first six months in the county jail. He is Joseph Dukendort, 20, of 556 West 20th place.

Grand Jury Exonerates Young Slayer of Father

Thomas J. Artist, 19 years old, was released from the county jail yesterday after the grand jury refused to take action against him for the fatal stabbing a week ago of his father, Russell, in their home at 12210 Ann street, Blue Island. Members of the family said the young man acted to stop his father from beating his mother.

STOP WRANGLING OVER WAR WORK, CLUBWOMEN TOLD

Federation Head Assails Bickering on Honors.

BY RITA FITZPATRICK.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Jan. 23.—Mrs. John L. Whitehurst of Baltimore, president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, asked the women of the country—clubwomen included—to quit bickering over leadership in national defense and get down to work without expecting honors for themselves.

Mrs. Whitehurst spoke in the Mayflower hotel at the opening session of the federation's midwinter board meeting and defense rally, which will bring defense authorities before 1,000 club leaders from the United States and Canada.

Want to Be Generals, She Says.

"The outstanding deterrent to a successful war effort is the psychological attitude of many of our people," Mrs. Whitehurst said. "In 20 years of activity in women's organizations I have never known the women to quarrel so bitterly over supremacy of leadership. The majority want to be generals, but few want to work without honor of some kind. They ask repeatedly: 'Will I head the division?' 'May I wear a uniform?' 'Will I receive a certificate?'"

She said the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor was followed by great excitement and demands from clubwomen that something be done at once. Thousands of them rushed to the Red Cross to volunteer for the first aid work, she said, and requests came for training for ambulance drivers, nurses, and aviators.

Illinois Reported Busy.

Mrs. Preston L. Wettaw, president of the Illinois Federation of Women's Clubs, said the clubwomen of Illinois are engrossed in all of the Red Cross activities, including knitting, first aid, and civilian defense. She told of the campaign to raise $2,000 for an ambulance and of the drive to sell defense stamps and bonds. A defense booklet which shows what 75,000 clubwomen can do for civilian defense is also being distributed among members in Illinois, she stated.

Brig. Gen. Frank E. Lowe, assistant to the army chief of staff, told the women that "if we don't fight in all four corners of the world, I would be surprised." He also gave as his opinion that attrition will decide the war. By summer or fall of next year, he continued, there ought to be evidences that would allow a reasonable, intelligent estimate of the situation.

Gen. Lowe urged the women to be on guard against "whispering campaigns." He stressed that American soldiers will not be sent out to fight until thoroly equipped and trained, and "let no one tell you differently."

An Example Is Cited.

During the questioning period a woman asked if the American Red Cross sold the socks, sweaters, and other articles made by volunteers. Mrs. Edward MacCauley, liaison officer between the American Red Cross and the office of civilian defense, in emphatically answering "no," described this type of question as part of a "whispering campaign."

"This excitement lasted about one week and then apathy again manifested itself," she said. "Bickering and quibbling then entered the picture." We are now being dominated by selfish thinking, and I am thoroly convinced that only a spiritual awakening can bring our people to a successful peace.

"The 2 million women of the general federation could bring this about if they had the will to do so."

Fiorello La Guardia, mayor of New York and director of the office of civilian defense, and Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, his aid, spoke during the day.

La Guardia said the talk "may be by last" public appearance as civilian defense director. He has been criticized for neglecting his duties as mayor.

$1.37 CASH GETS A CONGRESSMAN PENSION FOR LIFE

$348 Monthly Is Top; F.D.R. Gets Bill.

BY CHESLY MANLY.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Jan. 23.—Sen. Harry F. Byrd [D., Va.] disclosed today that a bill which reached President Roosevelt for his signature this afternoon will enable senators and representatives who are defeated next November to become eligible for federal pensions by paying only $1.37 into the treasury.

Members of the senate and the house provided for themselves in this generous manner in passing the Mead-Ramspeck bill, which liberalizes retirement annuities for civil service employés of the government. The congressmen's pension amendment was adopted by the senate before it passed the bill Monday and the house concurred in it on Wednesday without a single protest. The bill went to Mr. Roosevelt today from the committee on enrolled bills.

An Ingenious Scheme.

Sen. Byrd, who led the senate fight against the congressmen's pension grab, learned for the first time today how ingeniously devised it is to provide for the brethren who retire involuntarily in this year's primaries and general elections.

The senate amendment, sponsored by Sen. James M. Mead [D., N. Y.] and Sen. Walter F. George [D., Ga.], provides that members of the legislative branch of the government may elect to qualify for the benefits of the act if they give notice in writing to the disbursing officer "within the calendar year 1942."

Byrd said he was informed by the civil service commission, which administers the retirement system, that this amendment would permit members of congress who might be involuntarily retired in the primaries or elections this year to wait until Dec. 31, 1942, and then authorize the deduction of 5 per cent of their salary for one day.

$1.37 Gets a Pension.

At $10,000 a year, senators and representatives would be required to contribute a total of $500 from their salaries in a full year, but for one day the contribution would amount to only $1.37.

All members of congress who had served as much as five years would be eligible to qualify for retirement annuities by the end of the year. Those subsequently elected would be eligible within six months after taking the oath of office.

Congressmen who availed themselves of the retirement benefits would begin receiving monthly pensions upon attaining the age of 62 years. Members who are under 62 and who are defeated this year will have to wait until they become 62 to begin drawing pensions, but in the meaptime they may engage in any remunerative occupation.

$348 a Month Is Maximum.

The pensions for which members of congress are eligible under the bill are much more liberal than those available to ordinary taxpayers under the social security system. Congressmen would receive a minimum of $696 a year, or $58 a month, based upon five years of service. The maximum would be $4,175 a year, or nearly $348 a month, for congressmen who had served 35 years or more.

Under the social security act, persons with a contribution record of only five years receive a maximum of $42 a month on retirement. The maximum annuity under the social security law is $85 a month.

FEDERAL AGENCY PAYS POLL TAXES IN SOUTH, CHARGE

FSA Admits Including Levy on Loans.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Jan. 23—The joint congressional committee on nonessential federal expenditures, headed by Sen. Harry F. Byrd [D., Va.], announced today that it will investigate complaints that the Farm Security administration has been using federal funds for the payment of poll taxes in Alabama, in violation of the state constitution.

The constitution and laws of Alabama, as well as the laws of other states having poll taxes, prohibit the payment of such taxes by persons other than those for whom they are paid.

The FSA later admitted in a formal statement that it makes loans for the payment of delinquent poll taxes and other purposes necessary for distressed farm families "to assume the responsibility and obligations that go with citizenship in a democracy." The FSA statement indicated that the advancement of federal funds for the payment of poll taxes is not confined to Alabama.

See Political Maneuver.

Members of congress from southern states said they had received reports that the FSA is seeking to build up a political organization strong enough to resist increasing demands that it be abolished. Both the Byrd committee and the American Farm Bureau federation, which is especially powerful in the south, have recommended that the FSA be abolished.

According to the complaints filed with the Byrd committee, the FSA has been advancing funds for the payment of poll taxes in Hale county, Alabama, in the district of Rep. Sam Hobbs, a veteran member of the farm bureau federation. The complaints were first received by Judge R. K. Greene of the Probate court of Hale county, according to the Byrd committee's announcement. Inquiry disclosed that Judge Greene is a brother-in-law of Rep. Hobbs.

Statement by FSA.

The FSA statement, issued in response to inquiries, follows:

"The Farm Security administration's job is to rehabilitate distressed farm families. This generally involves the making of supervised loans to enable the borrowers to finance their farm operations, secure necessary medical attention, refinance existing burdensome obligations which are frequently scaled down by voluntary agreement, and pay real estate, personal property, and other accumulated current taxes.

"In this connection, if poll taxes are delinquent, they are considered as any other type of tax, and if the borrower so desires, sufficient funds will be included in the loan to take care of this obligation.

"The Farm Security administration is naturally interested in seeing that its borrowers are self-respecting members of their community. They are encouraged to take part in church, school, governmental, and other community and neighborhood affairs, and to assume the responsibility and obligations that go with citizenship in a democracy."

U. OF IOWA STUDENTS SEEK 'DIME A WEEK' TO AID SERVICE MEN

Iowa City, Ia., Jan. 23 [Special].—Students of the University of Iowa are going to take care of their fighting men.

A plan, scheduled to go into operation early next month, was announced here today by which the university's 6,000 students, by weekly contributions of a dime each, will provide money for their classmates called into the armed forces to complete their courses after the war.

As outlined by Francis Weaver, law student and originator of the idea, this is the procedure:

On Feb. 7 a group of students will be named as collectors to canvass students every Tuesday. Each will be asked to give a dime or more. The money will be used to buy defense bonds which will be deposited with the university treasurer. After the war those who return will receive $150 for each year's study necessary to complete their college course. The plan will remain in operation for three years after the end of hostilities, and any money remaining will be turned over to the student aid committee.

HUNTS CAPABLE MEN TO DIRECT U.S. WAR EFFORT

Concern of the government over the shortage of administrative talent to direct the war effort was reflected yesterday in two announcements—one made in Chicago and the other in Washington, D. C. In Washington the United States civil service commission announced that a special advisory committee had been appointed to aid the search for administrators both in the government service and in private enterprises.

In Chicago Henry C. Geisler, president of the Federal Business association of Chicago, announced that the association has been asked by the commission to assist the committee in the search for talent in the federal service here. The association consists of the heads of the various federal bureaus in Chicago.

Geisler said the program probably would provide for the transfer of men and women holding government positions in nondefense agencies to jobs essential in the prosecution of the war.

The program will get under way officially next Thursday at the luncheon meeting of the association in the Merchandise Mart. Emery E. Olson, chairman of the new committee, and another member, Dr. Leonard D. White, will speak.

SABATH WILL OFFER BILL FOR AIRPLANE PLANT FOR CHICAGO

Washington, D. C., Jan. 23 [Special].—A bill providing for the expenditure of 100 million dollars for construction of an airplane plant in or near Chicago will be introduced in the house Monday, Rep. Adolph J. Sabath [D., Ill.] said today.

Under terms of the measure the plant would be operated by the army and navy and civil aeronautics authority to aid in the construction, testing, and development of fighting aircraft.

He said Chicago's proximity to vital raw materials, its huge reservoir of trained workers, and its water and rail transportation facilities are among main reasons for favorable consideration of the measure at this time. Military experts long have advocated concentration of arms production in the middle west, which is far from the coastal danger zones and blackout areas.

SWEARS TIMBER OFFICIAL CALLED PROJECT 'SAFE'

Rosy promises of profit in an investment without risk were described yesterday by Robert E. Benson, a Madison, Wis., business man, in the trial of nine officers and associates of Resources Corporation International before a jury in the courtroom of Federal Judge Michael L. Igoe.

He said George Howard, an officer of the company, had promised him profits of several hundred per cent thru the operations of the corporation, which had been formed to exploit 2,000,000 acres of Mexican timber tracts.

"I thought it was risky," said Benson, "but Howard assured me it was safe. He told me several prominent business men had joined in the venture after visiting the optioned lands in Mexico. I invested $7,000."

Peter F. Schock, 525 Wisner street, Park Ridge, testified he invested $2,360 and had been appointed to the advisory board of the corporation. At the end of his testimony the trial was recessed until Monday.

Trapshooting Fans to Have Full Week-End

BY JUDITH CASS.

PRIORITIES and the fortunes of war may play havoc with the hobbies of some sportsmen, but one group that seems unaffected is that of the skeet and trap shooters. The shells used in shooting are of no use to the army or navy, a fact which causes rejoicing among the growing hordes of trap and skeet fans. And so shooting practice goes on each Saturday and Sunday at country clubs around Chicago which realize the sport's value to the civilian defense program.

The Glen View club, a mecca for shooters, will be host today to the South Shore Country club marksmen who will travel north to compete in the League of Country Club Trap Shooters. After a luncheon of the club's famous chicken pie, the marksmen will compete to select the four best shooters from each club, who will form two teams. The afternoon will end with hot ham sandwiches and cocktails and the awarding of prizes. Sidney S. Gorham is chairman of the Glen View's trap and skeet committee.

Tomorrow will find 50 or so men and women turned out for the finals of the Red, White, and Blue event at the club. Altho the Glen View has facilities for both types of shooting, this week-end's events will be straight trap shooting.

Glen View Also Shoots in North Shore League.

The Glen View also shoots in another league—the North Shore Trap and Skeet league—along with the Exmoor, the Onwentsia, and the Bob o' Link clubs. The Knollwood, which formerly competed with its fellow clubs, hasn't opened its traps this season.

Conway Olmsted is chairman of shooting at the Onwentsia, and Wallace N. Barker at the Exmoor. Both clubs schedule events for each Saturday and Sunday.

On the bluffs along Lake Michigan in Highland Park, another group of shooters gets its weekly practice. The Hotel Moraine On-the-Lake recently has inaugurated Saturday and Sunday shoots open to the public. Among the women who shoot regularly there are Mrs. Ralph Mills, Mrs. Kenneth W. Moore, Mrs. J. Benjamin Cleaver, Mrs. Thomas W. Alder, and Mrs. Edwin M. White.

Charles G. Daweses Mark 53d Wedding Day Today.

Unless some one has planned a surprise party for them Gen. and Mrs. Charles G. Dawes will observe their 53d wedding anniversary today quietly. The Dawses, who usually go south each winter, have made no plans for a trip this year.

The Exmoor club will salute officers stationed at Great Lakes, Fort Sheridan, and the Glenview airport with a cocktail party and dinner-dance tonight. Among the hosts and hostesses will be Mr. and Mrs. Jerome P. Bowes Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Frank Towner, Mr. and Mrs. Duane L. Clinton, Mr. and Mrs. William A. Patterson, Mr. and Mrs. Francis M. Knight, Mr. and Mrs. Theodore A. Butz, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Huszagh, Mr. and Mrs. Perry R. Pennington, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Hummer, Mr. and Mrs. William K. Harrison, Mr. and Mrs. William H. Hammond, and Mr. and Mrs. Harold A. Moore.

Already the club is planning its second party for officers, a military ball to be given on Feb. 21.

Announce Engagement of Lenore Scharschug.

Mr. and Mrs. George J. Scharschug of River Forest announce the engagement and approaching marriage of their daughter, Lenore, to Lieut. Fred M. McCarthy of the United States army air corps. Both Miss Scharschug and Lieut. McCarthy were graduated from the University of Illinois.

Hay racks have been substituted for the sleighs which were to draw the members of the Sophomore assembly along the north shore tonight. Three racks will be waiting at the Winnetka Woman's club at 8:30 o'clock, and after the ride the young people will return to the club for a spaghetti supper, entertainment by Fletcher Butler, pianist, and informal dancing. Mr. and Mrs. Elmer J. Dick, the Gerald Burnhams, and Mr. and Mrs. John Holmes will be the hosts and hostesses for tonight's party.

Expenses, except for stamps, are nonexistent for the ball which the American Theater Wing of War Relief will give tomorrow night. It is a Stay-Right-at-Home-Ball and the price of tickets is just what each guest would pay if he went out for the evening. Each decides whether he will dine out, go to the theater, or perhaps entertain a group of friends some place, and then sends the proper amount to cover these expenses to the War Relief offices in New York, where another such ball will be held tomorrow night.

Andover Club Will Hold Annual Dinner Monday.

Memories of good times in "prep" school will be traded back and forth at the annual dinner of the Andover Club of Chicago at the University club at 6:30 o'clock on Monday. All members of the club attended the Phillips academy in Andover, Mass. Among those who are coming from Andover for the dinner are Dr. Claude M. Fuess, headmaster; James Gould, treasurer, and James Adriance, assistant dean of admissions. Dr. Fuess is expected to discuss the recent authorization of a summer session at the school to be devoted almost entirely to war work. Extra courses in mathematics and the sciences also will be included in the regular program.

Mr. and Mrs. William T. Bacon of Winnetka will give a tea tomorrow for the visitors from the east, to which parents of present and prospective students at the academy are being invited.

Harlan W. Cooley is president of the Andover Club of Chicago, George W. Dixon Jr. vice president, and Irving H. Peck Jr. secretary. Mr. Bacon, Robert A. Gardner, Stephen Y. Hord, Leeds Mitchell, and Clifford Rodman are members of the local alumni advisory committee.

She Is Among Benefit Party Sponsors

Miss Marjorie Kempnich undoubtedly gave cod liver oil to her dog, Shaggie, for all well brought up puppies are given "bottled sunshine" nowadays, but it is for cod liver oil for babies that she and a group of her sister scholars at the Evanston Township High school are giving a card party on Feb. 28 at the Woman's club of Evanston. The proceeds will go to the cod liver oil fund of the Infant Welfare society. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

Women in War Work

By India Moffett

[The Women in War Work department will report on women's activities in war and defense work and will answer questions of women who wish to take part in these activities.]

Almost each Sunday since last spring a group of women working under the title of the North Shore Committee for Recreation of Service Men has entertained the aviation cadets from Glenview at suppers and open houses. The men are invited to suppers thruout the north shore in groups of two or four, and then all are invited to an open house at another home. Hostesses at these festivities are individually responsible for inviting young women to help entertain the cadets.

Mrs. Marcus D. Richards.

Mrs. Gilbert H. Scribner is chairman of the committee, and Mrs. Marcus D. Richards is co-chairman. Mrs. Richard P. Matthiessen makes arrangements for the open houses, and Mrs. Fletcher Marsh for the suppers. Any north shore resident interested in entertaining the cadets at either type of function is asked to call either Mrs. Matthiessen or Mrs. Marsh in Winnetka. Names of hosts and hostesses are never revealed before the parties, since the committee is anxious to keep them for service men only, and others might be tempted to come if the names and addresses were released ahead of time.

Mrs. Roger Sherman Jr. of Winnetka and a group of her friends are busy repainting and upholstering cast-off furniture to be placed in a recreation room at the Glenview base. The group is particularly anxious to obtain more chairs and small tables, and any one who has furniture to donate is asked to call Mrs. Sherman.

The women's coördinating committee of the Chicago defense commission is opening an information center where women can obtain assistance in solving all sorts of war and defense problems. Information about other organizations will be disseminated from this central place, and volunteers will be helped to find the specific jobs for which they are fitted. Mrs. G. Corson Ellis is in charge of the center, which will be open from 9 to 5 o'clock each weekday and is located in the committee headquarters, 228 North La Salle street, telephone Franklin 7560.

Mrs. William H. Stanley, chairman of the committee, said yesterday that the committee, composed of 65 volunteers, already has handled more than 26,000 volunteer enrollments and is now in the process of sorting and sending them to various community chairmen who will make the actual duty assignments.

The Chicago Assembly of Catholic Daughters of America will give a dance for soldiers, sailors, and marines tonight in the National Catholic Community Service center, 1122 South Wabash avenue. Miss Elizabeth O'Brien, 7700 South Sangamon street, is chairman and Mrs. J. C. Webber, co-chairman.

Because of the large sale of tickets for a Red Cross benefit, the Surf Hotel production unit transferred its dessert luncheon today from the hotel to the Lakeview center, 3212 Broadway, where 2,000 persons can be accommodated. Mrs. Lois Schraeger is chairman and Mrs. Josephine Spungin, co-chairman of the luncheon which will be served at 1:30 p. m.

The scene of this true playlet: A luncheon party in an Astor street apartment.

One guest: "Mary and I drove in together this morning for a meeting at the defense saving staff. I said I hoped we were finished with the meeting by 1 o'clock because I had another meeting at that time. I dared not say I was going to a luncheon, it seemed so frivolous at this time. Mary said she had an appointment at 1, too. And we meet at this party!"

Another guest: "I told my maid I'd be out all afternoon, busy with some work. I couldn't bear to say I was going to play bridge; I feel so guilty wasting an afternoon."

And so it went.

We do not think this attitude is necessary, however, for there is not enough defense and relief work now to keep every unemployed woman busy all day, every day. So, do the work at hand now, but don't feel guilty every time you take time out for a luncheon, or a game of bridge, for they will help to keep up your morale and make you ready to work harder when the necessity arises.

Red Cross Nears Halfway Mark in War Fund Drive

Yesterday's receipts totaled $37,787 in the Red Cross war fund drive for $3,750,000, James B. Forgan, general chairman, reported. This brought the total of all contributions to date to $1,532,921 or 41 per cent of the Chicago chapter's share of the $50,000,000 national total. Included was $15,000 from the Pure Oil company.

The largest of four employé subscriptions was $4,814 from Hibbard Spencer Bartlett and company, representing a 100 per cent signup. Others, included with the company donation, were $2,068 from the Superior Sleeprite corporation; $1,500 from the Hydrox, Chappell, and Thompson Ice Cream company, and $655 from the Pioneer Trust and Saving bank.

Company donations exclusive of employé gifts were received from the City National Bank and Trust company, $5,500; Pabst Brewing company, $2,500; Pick Securities company, Inc., $2,000; Lord & Thomas, $1,750, and Chicago Roller Skate company and the American Locomotive company, $1,000 each.

A total of $140 in pennies, nickels, and dimes was collected for the Red Cross at a rally in the Forestville school, 622 East 45th street.

Robert E. Spiel and Marie Swift to Wed Today

Miss Marie Swift will wear her mother's wedding gown of ivory satin and Duchess lace and the latter's net veil edged in lace when she becomes the bride of Robert E. Spiel this afternoon. The Rev. Harrison Ray Anderson of the Fourth Presbyterian church will perform the ceremony at 4:30 o'clock in the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Gustavus F. Swift of 1551 Astor street. Mrs. Swift was Miss Marie Fitzgerald.

Mr. and Mrs. James E. Baum are here from Palm Beach, Fla., for their niece's wedding. The Baums' daughter, Mrs. Alfred Gawthrop of Plainfield, N. J., also will be among the guests, as will the bride's aunt, Mrs. Ruth McGuire of New York.

Miss Jane Swift will attend her sister, and George Spiel Jr. will serve as best man for his brother. The two young men are the sons of Mr. and Mrs. George Spiel of Pine Grove avenue. Ushering will be Edward S. French, Robert A. Carr, and John L. Fortune Jr. After a wedding trip of several weeks, Mr. Spiel will bring his bride back to Chicago to live.

Telegrams of best wishes will be speeded eastward today by friends of Mr. and Mrs. Milton Johnston Blair, formerly of Geneva and now of New York City, for Miss Jane Blair and Alleyne Carleton Howell Jr. are to be married this afternoon in the home of the bride's cousins, Mr. and Mrs. Lew Wallace of Rye, N. Y. Young Mr. Howell's father, the Rev. Alleyne C. Howell, will perform the ceremony, assisted by the bride's great uncle, the Rev. John Allan Blair of Chambersburg, Pa. John Inniss Howell will be his brother's best man. A small reception will follow the ceremony which will be attended only by members of the immediate families. After a brief wedding trip, Mr. Howell and his bride will be at home in New York City.

In a small chapel ceremony this afternoon in Trenton, Ont., Miss Patricia Emrich will become the bride of James H. Gillfillan. The wedding is being held in Canada because young Mr. Gillfillan was unable to obtain leave from his duties as a pilot officer with the royal Canadian air force. Miss Emrich and her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Lyman Emrich of Evanston, traveled north on Thursday. They were followed last night by Mr. Gillfillan's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Solon John Gillfillan of Glencoe, and his brother, Thomas, who is to serve as best man.

The marriage of Miss Elizabeth Mary Symons to Paul W. Schulz will take place tonight in the Morgan Park Methodist Episcopal church and will be followed by a reception at the Windermere East hotel. Miss Symons is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Karl Symons of South Hoyne avenue. Mr. Schulz, who is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Paul G. Schulz of Milwaukee, and his bride will live in Kalamazoo, Mich. Front VIEWS and PROFILES

BY MARCIA WINN

Coals to Newcastle.

We are indebted to the Sycamore [Ill.] Tribune for an item on why it is necessary to speed up production. The house of a Sycamorian caught on fire the other day and while firemen swarmed over the roof, an industrious man named Bob Brown cleverly backed his truck up to the house and dumped a load of coal into the basement.

Helpful Hints.

All the parlor tacticians are full of suggestions these days as to the conduct of the war. Take the Japanese use of firecrackers to create confusion. This has badly upset one man we know who, after long experience in tossing an occasional 3 inch salute down an areaway to silence his merry neighbors, had been planning to suggest to our government that it employ similar tactics. However, we have learned of one Chicagoan, James H. Burdette, advertising manager of a seed store, who has gone beyond the parlor stage. For some time he has been sending suggestions to the British government. When enemy planes zoom over a city at night, why not light giant bonfires in the country far afield to divert focus? Or when they zoom near coastal ports, why not fire old tubs out at sea? Well the British jumped at the idea and are doing it.

Bargain.

In keeping with the spirit of January clearance sales [Willard Waterman of W-G-N reports], a loop newsboy has put a sign above newspapers ordinarily selling for 2 cents: While they last—2 cents.

Metropolitan Mosaic.

Two brown horses pulling a bright green new grocery wagon. . . . The draftee on the bus who, gallantly giving his seat to a pretty young girl, had to fight to make her take it and then found, to mutual consternation, that the bus had broken down and all must disembark. . . . The commuter who buys a defense stamp for every cigarette he smokes. . . . The homely waitress in a loop restaurant who, when she speaks, suddenly reminds her hearers of Norma Shearer, Intermezzo, Dinah Shore. . . . The clouds of yellow forsythia in a Michigan avenue florist's window and the hobby-horse, its pack saddles bursting with clear lemon jonquils and white tulips. . . . The sun a worn copper disk thru gray clouds, the warm pink of its setting caressing a church spire, and the thin yellow rind of the rising moon at which 2 year old Edward Allen III., gazed in rapt wonder, and cried, "The moon is broken."

Inspiration.

Louisa May Alcott once said she conjured up Little Women over an ironing board. A Chicagoan who looks like a piece of lovely old Dresden, Mrs. Edward Harris Brewer, found her thoughts turning to a world at war while taking a Red Cross first aid course the other day. The result:

The world is turning on its axis;
We'll win thru tho high the tax is.

Sorry, But It's the Censorship.

Dorothy Lamour's mother told the story. She came back to her home near Beverly Hills on New Year's day and hurried to telephone greetings to a neighbor. "Yes, the same to you," the neighbor said, "but what do you think of what you have in your back yard?" "What have I there?" "I can't tell," the neighbor said, "but you go look." The lady did. There she found a gigantic ——— ———. "What's more," she said, "practically every one has an ——— ——— ——— in his back yard now."

And Mrs. Edwin Page of Chicago, who has a home at ——— ———, that point on the California coast near which American planes finally sank that ——— submarine, looked out her window one morning and what do you suppose she saw on the beach? Two ——— sailors, washed up by the tide. And right outside her back yard she has an ——— ———, too.

MISS BERNICE STONE.

Miss Bernice Stone will become the bride of Robert Kahn, son of Mr. and Mrs. Nathan Kahn of Commonwealth avenue, tomorrow. Miss Stone, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William E. Stone of Columbia avenue, attended the American Academy of Art and the Frederic Mizen Academy of Art. Her fiancé received his degrees from Northwestern university and from the Harvard Graduate School of Business.

Thousands Will Learn First Aid from Red Cross

Do the words "pressure points" mean anything to you? Can you make an arm sling, a head bandage, or a chest bandage? Do you know how to administer artificial respiration?

All these emergency treatments and many others are incorporated in the standard first aid course which is being given thruout the city and suburbs under the auspices of the Red Cross. At the present rate of expansion, nearly 100,000 persons will be in training by the middle of February, reports D. Melville Carr, director of first aid for the Chicago chapter.

Mayor Fiorello La Guardia of New York, director of civilian defense, has asked the Red Cross to give first aid training to 5 per cent of the population this year. On this basis, the Chicago chapter would be expected to train 200,000 civilians. However, Mr. Carr hopes to triple this figure.

"When war was declared, we already had 1,000 trained instructors on call," Mr. Carr explained, "and we're making plans to train 1,000 more instructors immediately. Classes are being organized, upon request, in the city parks, clubs, fraternal organizations, societies, and groups of all kinds that can muster 25 persons or more for a class.

"When an instructor is not available, we ask several members of the group to join the instructor training course, and when they are certified they teach the others in their group."

Since all the Chicago Park district physical instructors are certified to teach first aid, classes have been started in 96 fieldhouses. Already 6,000 persons have enrolled in 150 adult, 72 junior, and three advanced first aid classes, while many parks also have a long waiting list.

The standard course is 20 hours, usually presented in two hour sessions once a week, while the advanced course takes 10 hours. Every one is urged to take both courses, Mr. Carr said.

In addition to the park program, companies thruout the area are offering the course to their employés. A huge program is under way to train employés in almost every industry, in all the public utilities except the bus and surface lines, and the 16,000 teachers employed by the Chicago board of education and 6,000 others in the chapter area, Mr. Carr said.

Why this extensive program, many may ask? To prevent accidents, to conserve man power, to save the valuable time of physicians and nurses, to save surgical dressings are among the many answers.

FUR TRIMMED COATS

Formerly $145 to $175

Startling values? Indeed! That's Mink, not only in the collar, but all the way down to the hem on that coat at the right . . . and a gorgeous Silver Fox collar on that shapely model next to it. How can we give you all this on $108 coats? Well, they are not $108 coats. They were made to sell for very much more. But because they're close-outs, you—Mrs. shrewd shopper—can save a pretty penny...and be all set for "the duration"!

BAD NEWS.

Delia was very glad to hear that Miss Murdle wasn't going to die, and that being that, she didn't want to think or talk about her any more. She had been clever and resourceful, she had done the right thing, and everything was going to be all right.

Uncle Philip would get well, Antony would come back, the war would come to an end, and they would be married. She began to plan her wedding dress.

The afternoon was slipping into dusk when Parker opened the drawing room door and announced Mr. Brown. Delia came out of her dream and got up. She saw a big, heavy man coming to meet her. Parker shut the door, and he said in very good English with just a trace of accent:

"How do you do, Miss Merridew—you are Miss Merridew?"

"Yes."

He bowed and put out his hand. Delia felt obliged to take it. It was large, and strong, and cold.

"Miss Merridew, now that your servant has gone, I must tell you that my name is not Brown. I am Cornelius Rossiter. You will, perhaps, have heard of me from my brother, Antony."

"O, yes."

"You will wonder why I have called myself Brown. It is because I am over here on some very confidential business. It was thought best that I should not use my own name—you can understand that."

"O, yes."

He made her feel about six years old—big, smooth, easy, with that impassive face. The light, expressionless eyes looked at her as if she weren't there. They made her wish to be anywhere else.

"Won't you sit down, Miss Merridew? I have come to see you about Antony. I am afraid that I have not got very good news."

Delia took a step back and sat down upon the chair from which she had risen. She had sat there and planned her wedding dress. He had come to bring her bad news about Antony.

He drew up a chair beside her and sat down, all without hurry. Delia pressed her hands together and waited for him to speak. Her eyes were fixed upon his face. He saw them dilate and darken. He said:

"I am very sorry indeed to have to bring you such news. Antony was like a brother to me. His parents were the only father and mother I can remember. I have always looked upon him as a brother."

He saw her lips part, but no words came. She looked at him. He said:

"It grieves me very much to have to tell you that Antony is dead."

Delia sat quite stiff and still. There was no motion or life left in her. She did not feel anything at all. She sat there and looked at Cornelius. Presently he said:

"I think you were friends. You will want to know how it happened, and I am afraid I cannot tell you very much, because I am ignorant of what you know already."

That was how he spoke—a little more formally than an Englishman, but quite fluent, quite easy. It was quite easy for him to tell her that Antony was dead.

He went on in that easy way.

"It is like this, Miss Merridew. Antony came over to Holland to see me. It was very dangerous for him to come—you can understand that. I was so far from expecting him that I had, a little while before, arranged for a parcel to be taken to his address in England—I should say to the address of your uncle's firm. But by the time it arrived everything had changed. Antony was not there to receive it. He had come over to Holland to see me, and most unfortunately he was recognized. He tried to escape arrest and was shot."

A quiver went over her at the word, but she did not feel anything yet. She had stopped thinking. If she began to think again, the word would have a dreadful meaning. She quivered under its impact, but she was too numb to feel anything. She went on looking at Cornelius with dark, dilated eyes.

He was speaking again after a slight respectful pause.

"I have been more fortunate since I have arrived here safely. I went at once to call upon your uncle in his office, but I found that it was in ruins and he himself in the hospital, permitted to see no one. After some inquiry I arrived at a clerk, a Mr. Holt, who informs me that he has delivered my parcel to your charge in Mr. Merridew's house. It contains papers of the utmost importance. You will please believe that it distresses me to trouble you now with my affairs. The papers are very important for others as well as for myself. You will not, I hope, think me wanting in consideration if I ask that you will give me my parcel."

Delia sat on the edge of her chair, quite still, quite straight. Her hands were in her lap. They held one another so tightly that the fingers were numb. There was no more feeling in them than there was in her heart. Antony was dead, and Cornelius was asking for his parcel. But she couldn't give him the parcel. She had taken the box down to the bank and left it there. She must tell him that, and then he would get up and go away and leave her alone.

Her lips were stiff when she tried to speak. The sound they made wasn't like her own voice at all. She heard it say:

"I can't give you the parcel. I put it in the bank, and the bank is shut."

"The bank at Wayshot?"

"Yes."

Now he would get up and go away. There was nothing for him to stay for. The parcel was in the bank. But he didn't go. He kept that impassive look upon her and said:

"That is very unfortunate. Those papers are necessary to my business. I cannot afford delay. Every moment is of importance, but if the parcel is in the bank, there is nothing that can be done tonight—you are right about that. I suppose the bank will not open until 10 o'clock tomorrow. Well, we must just make the best of it. I will come back again in the morning, with your permission, at a little before 10—shall we say about 20 minutes to 10—and then I need not trouble you any more now."

He really did go then.

Delia sat down in her chair. She went on sitting there, quite straight, quite still, quite numb.

When Parker came in to draw the curtains he said gratefully:

"It fitted a treat, Miss Delia. Mrs. Parker said to thank you special from her, because she hadn't had a wink of sleep for two nights. The fact is, miss, I don't seem as if I could rest when I've one of those things on my mind, and Mrs. Parker being a light sleeper, she says I don't give her a chance, and she's very grateful indeed."

He switched on a standard lamp and drew the heavy curtains at the three long windows. They were the new curtains which she had chosen when she left school—dull rose-colored velvet, very soft, with a bloom on it. The lamp had a shade of ivory vellum. There was a soft light all around it. Delia sat too far away for it to shine on her. The rest of the room was dim and shadowy.

Parker finished with the curtains and went away. It was dusk outside, and presently it would be dark, and then it would be light again and dark again, and light once more—endless days fading into endless nights, dawn and sunset alternating, winter and spring, summer and autumn, year in, year out, for unnumbered, unnumbered years. Not one dawn when she would wake and say, "Antony will come today." Not one night when she would lie down to sleep and think, "Antony will come tomorrow." No day, no single day of all the years, when she would see him and hold him again.

She thought about these things. They did not hurt her yet. She said them, but she did not feel them. She said, "Antony is dead," and she felt nothing. It began to frighten her that she felt nothing.

What she did feel at long last was a deathly fatigue. When she got up from her chair she was so tired that she could hardly stand. She went slowly up to her room, and told Ellen that she was going to bed. Ellen brought her a hot water bottle and hot soup. The hot water bottle was comforting, because she was very cold. She drank the soup because Ellen said Mrs. Parker would come up herself if she didn't.

A little later when Mrs. Parker, soft footed as fat women so often are, stood at the doorway looking in. Delia lay drowned in sleep, the bedside lamp, with its tilted shade, throwing a golden glow across her golden hair. Mrs. Parker didn't hold with sleeping with a light on your face. She tiptoed across the room and turned it out.

It was a long time after this that the telephone bell rang. The sound came into the deep dreamless place where Delia was and made an echo there—the faint, far echo of a bell ringing in another world.

A Skirt-Jacket Display Takes Shopper's Eye

BY REA SEEGER.

After weeks of dashing back and forth between jacket and skirt displays, career girls and other interested shoppers are going to cheer wildly for a new get-together stunt featured in one smart store here in Chicago. The skirts are hung at one side of an aisle, the jackets at the other side, so that all the available colors and contrasts are right before your eyes ready for selection. There's no more running round in circles trying to carry a color in your mind.

There are dozens and dozens of brilliant colors—red, orange, gray greens, and the more subtle tones, some clear lemon yellows, and all kinds of beige tints, as well as the very smart copper tones and cinnamon shades. Other interesting finds are the many pastels—pink, blue, soft green, violet, and yellows.

All these are of solid colors in soft woolen flannels, some homespun textures, and a few gabardines. Matching or contrasting skirts of the same colors and fabrics are just as snappy as the jackets. And just across the way are all the newest blouses to complete a timely, high fashion ensemble for immediate wear.

Plaids, checks and stripes are positively sensational, not only in size but strong color combine. Huge plaids are effectively cut on the bias for snappy accent trim in pockets, bands, and sometimes for the entire skirt. The same rather abandoned sized idea is stressed in the checks and stripes, in which the crisp accent is achieved with a bias cut of the pattern.

There also are small patterns and designs for the shoppers who steer shy of the more exuberant patterns, both in color and size. There are precise plaids that make classic tailored suits ideal for office and street wear and the indispensables of black, brown, and navy. All you do is take your choice and pay your money, which, incidentally, is usually very easy on any clothes allowance.

HAVE SOME LEFTOVER HAM? Then scallop it this way: Alternate layers of sliced cooked potatoes, chopped ham, and diced celery in a greased baking dish. Pour over the combination a thin white sauce to which you've added 1½ tablespoons peanut butter for each cut. Sprinkle the dish with buttered crumbs and bake 35 minutes at 350 degrees. You'll love it!

PROGRESS IN DRIED FOOD MARKETING: We're going to be able to get all kinds of dehydrated foods, especially vegetables, before long. Potatoes, tomatoes, onions, cabbage, celery, green beans will be among 'em. Research nutrition workers have found how to retain the maximum of food value and fresh flavor.

HIGH-PRICED CAULIFLOWER: Four apple-sized heads of cauliflower for $2.40. That's the price a friend of mine, living in Trinidad, had to pay just recently. But she would have her cauliflower. Rice is the most important food there, she reports. And plantains, which she says are delicious, are used in many ways. A plantain, in case you don't know, is a banana which isn't edible in the raw state. It must be cooked to be good. It is also dried and ground into a meal used in baking breads and cakes.

COFFEE FOR THE ARMY: Two million, 500 thousand cups a day. That's a lot of coffee! Army cooks are being taught what every careful coffee maker should know, that coffee shouldn't be made more than 15 minutes ahead of serving time, that it must never actually boil, that coffee making equipment must be kept scrupulously clean.

ON FUDGE MAKING: A white fudge flavored with two teaspoons grated orange rind is unusual, and good. . . . Mrs. W. E. Foster, 1504 E. 53d street, makes a spiced fudge, using, for three cups of sugar and a cup of milk, two tablespoons cocoa, one teaspoon cinnamon, ½ teaspoon cloves, and a sprinkle of allspice. Butter, nuts, and vanilla, too, as usual. . . . Some like peanut butter in chocolate fudge, others don't.

CAREER GIRL BREAKFAST: Hazel Austin, 166 West Jackson boulevard, gets credit for this morning meal for that gal who doesn't take time really to eat: Pour into a tall glass one slightly beaten egg, the juice of an orange, a teaspoon of sugar, and a few grains of salt. Add enough milk to fill the glass. Drink up, grab the coat and hat, and be off for the office!

Smart Crocheted Calot

BY ELLEN BRUCE.

This crocheted calot is done in simple stitches and may be created in a few minutes with a rosette trimming set at the center front. A youthful choice is to have the clever pompons set at each side, creating the appearance of earmuffs.

For instructions in crocheting the calot, No. 1058, send 10 cents in stamps or coin to the Needlework Bureau, Chicago Tribune, 220 Fifth avenue, New York City.

Good Morning!

Rich playboy loved lady medic
"Ah-hh-hh!" ah-ed he,
"Never knew before a 'strep' throat Fun could be. . . ."
'Gainst Doc's better judgment, wed her
For she thought,
That to mix career and marriage
SHE hadn't OUGHT. . . .
But—he said it didn't matter,
He'd be good
And to meddle in her business,
Nev-er would.
BUT—he found among her patients
Man-y MEN.
GOLLY! Did he cut up! A-gain
And A-GAIN!
You see, the poor guy was idle—
Naught to do
But just sit in luxury and
Stew and STEW.
Suddenly his wife's scorn, it
Got him down
HE took job a-selling neckties [under an alias]
Down in town. . . .
Was the doctor PROUD to see how
HE'D come thru!
Ditch her own career now she planned
She would do. . . .
BUT—
Up popped fellow workers, yapping
Why should WEALTH
Grab the WORKER'S jobs and money
AND—by stealth! [You see? They'd found him out!]
Here was Peter Kirk a-robbing
From the poor. . . .
Willy nilly Pete is shown the well known door.
IS HE DOWN!
BUT—speaks his gard'ner—
"'f I was YOU
I'd MAKE jobs instead of TAKE 'em
's thing to DO. . . ."
Whoops, my dears!
That spelled the answer!
Ring, bells, ring!
Playboy now has work, doc, bride
And EVERYsing!

Readers, yes, the story's sappy. . . . Fonda makes a goofy pappy. . . . Barbara, whom he doth pester, is as good as the script lets her—ditto rest of cast. . . . Direction I regard with no affection [excuse wrong word please which rhymes but means noddings]. . . . YET— it seems a thought abideth, peeping out from where it hideth. . . . MAYHAP, those we THINK are shirking—really are debarred from working. . . . Labor's foot on cap'tal's head. . . . WHERE'M I AT . . .! Farewell, she said.

See you tomorrow.

Looking at Hollywood

—By John Chapman—

Hollywood, Cal., Jan. 23.—Charles Boyer, the turtle eyed great lover of the screen, has signed a long term contract with Universal whereby he will produce and star in his own pictures. He will assume his new post as soon as he finishes "The Constant Nymph," which he is about to do at Warners'.

Charles Boyer.

There have been few producer-stars in film history. Most notable recent one is Orson Welles, who produced and starred in "Citizen Kane." This season Orson [who also rates as a writer] is producing two films but starring in neither. He doesn't appear in "The Magnificent Ambersons," but he directs it; he will play just a small character rôle in "Journey Into Fear," whose stars will be Dolores Del Rio and Joseph Cotten.

Most successful of all producer-stars was Harold Lloyd, because Lloyd actually owned the films he made. His income reached as high as $40,000 a week. Charlie Chaplin was and some times still is a producer-star. Mary Pickford was one, too, beginning in 1919, when she made "Daddy Long Legs." Boyer, the Gallic heart throb, is now traveling in select company.

Hitler has not yet been the main character of a Hollywood picture. His puss, lined up on the crosslines of Walter Pidgeon's telescopic rifle sight, was the springboard of a swell melodrama, "Man Hunt." In Carole Lombard's soon to be released last picture, a comedy, there's a fellow who looks like Hitler. Charlie Chaplin was Adolf's double in "The Great Dictator."

Well, Frederick Hazlitt Brennan, who wrote the Broadway play, "The Wookey," has written a screen yarn with Hitler as the central character, and experts who have read it—Mark Hellinger, for one—consider it a bang-up melodrama. It starts the day before the war ends. One of the terms of the armistice is that Hitler must be turned over to the allies, Germany sends out four or five Hitler doubles. One is captured in Poland and killed; another in Russia, and so on.

As one man acquainted with the script puts it, it's a natural. For 15 or 60 cents or whatever, Joe Public can sit in a comfortable seat and enjoy the killing of Hitler five or six times [for finally the real A. H. is caught].

But so far the movies are afraid of making the film. Several studios have liked it but hedged on it, and not without reason. Suppose you make the picture and suppose it costs a million dollars. You finish it before the war is over—but before it is released Hitler dies of pneumonia, glanders, suicide, or general cussedness. Whoosh! A million goes out the window.

Jed Harris has advanced a clever suggestion. Why not, he says, take out life insurance on Hitler? Why not bet Lloyds that Adolf will last thru the war? The premium on a million dollar policy might be $200,000 or $300,000. This would protect the picture—and would be worth the dough in publicity alone.

Warners seem to have come thru with the first civilian defense movie. They're going to shoot one called "Peter Biddle, Air Warden." It's about a Caspar Milquetoast playwright who comes out of his ivory tower and volunteers for home town protection. . . . Before she left for New York and a winter vacation in her New Hampshire home, Bette Davis had her long bob cut short. So she can do her hair at home in case she's snowbound and can't get to a beauty parlor. . . . Big Boy Williams is bedded with a strep throat, which is a common ailment hereabout. . . . Gary Cooper and his baseball coach, Lefty O'Doul, are holidaying near Sun Valley. . . . Denney Kenney, an old column contributor from New York, writes that he's going back into the army. "I never thought," he says, "that I'd have to go to Japan to catch the Sixth avenue L, slow as it was."

Oscar Levant's Recital a Lively One-Man Show

BY EDWARD BARRY.

Never in the memory of the oldest inhabitant has a pianist opened a recital by warning his audience that the performance was not going to be very good. Equally unprecedented is the procedure of playing encores first, on the theory that there otherwise would not be any.

But Oscar Levant, the "Information Please" wizard who is at home in everything from "Yes Sir, That's My Baby" to "Die Meistersinger," kicked tradition out the door last night when he came to the Civic Opera house to give his first local recital—or rather floor show.

Interspersing the music with jokes and stories [or vice versa], he was at once the master of ceremonies and the sole attraction. And since the butt of Levant's astringent humor was usually Levant, the whole show was one of the most self-contained and self-sufficient ever seen on local boards.

He proceeded on the theory that a piano recital, "even a good one," is a rather bitter experience for a listener, and he did his best to keep his audience's mind off the music. Sometimes he made advance announcements about the length of time a piece would consume. "Be back in nine minutes!" he warned cheerily, as he began a Bach partita.

In a program of Bach, Beethoven, Brahms, and other composers, Levant confirmed, on the whole, his own estimate of the quality of his playing. His eccentric Chopin and his sullen and forthright Brahms seemed to dismiss these men as mere excuses for anecdote rather than serious composers.

However, there were times when one could quarrel with Levant's opinion of himself and claim that the performance showed imagination and forethought. It was hard to tell, for the psychological acrobatics that are necessary if a listener is to adjust his mood to gags, to Bach, and then to gags again are not to be mastered without long practice.

The event was a benefit for the Church Mission of Help, and a brilliant audience was in attendance.

Fight Urged to Keep Maternal and Infant Mortality Rate Low

Despite the war and a shortage of civilian physicians and nurses, the fight to keep maternal and infant death rates at a minimum must be continued, said a statement issued yesterday by the American Committee on Maternal Welfare. The committee is composed of 23 organizations, including various obstetrical, gynecological, and hospital groups.

"In the face of the inevitable increase in the birth rate in wartime," the statement read, "the mobilization of several million men into the army and navy means the withdrawal from civilian practice of more than 30,000 doctors and many thousands of nurses.

"With more babies on the way and fewer doctors and nurses to give them a fair start in life, the present problem is clear. It means greater effort for every one involved, doctors, nurses, public health personnel, and financing and hospitals."

The maternal death rate in the United States, the committee reported, has been cut from 67 for each 1,000 deaths in 1930 to 40 for each 1,000 in 1939. During the same period, the infant death rate has been reduced from 65 to 48 for each 1,000 live births.

Mrs. C. S. Dewey Heads Red Cross Unit in Capital

Washington, D. C., Jan. 23 [Special].—Mrs. Charles S. Dewey of Chicago, wife of the Illinois 9th district congressman, has been appointed Red Cross chairman of an emergency canteen unit for southeast Washington, where the Deweys live while in the capital. Mrs. Dewey is a director of the Chicago chapter of the Red Cross and is known for her war work during the last war, in which Rep. Dewey served in the navy.

Thru the Looking Glass

This balmy spell of weather is a good shopping time, an especially good one for stocking up on the very things you'll need when it turns colder, as it undoubtedly will. For one thing, you can shop in comfort; for another, there are beauty bargains to be had these days the like of which, what with war and priorities and taxes and industrial troubles, we may not see again for years.

There is, for example, a neat little beauty aid called a hand-and-body-balm that is a friend in need to the woman with dry skin. It's the kind of thing that helps you keep your skin rose petal soft, no matter how wild the wind. There aren't many preparations so rich in the benign oils the parched skin needs, but it's an emulsion, so beautifully blended that it leaves no greasy film.

You can use it for softening the skin of your hands, your body, even your face—and if you're smart you'll be careful to apply it daily to the knees, arms, and elbows, areas that seem especially inclined to roughen when the weather does.

It's one of the nicest hand balms you could find. There is only one point to remember about its use for any purpose—and that is to use it sparingly. Resist the temptation to lather it on. A little is as effective as too much and is absorbed with more satisfying speed. The skin will feel softer instantly, but it won't be sticky if you stay the hand that applies the creamy liquid.

It's a buy, and even the small bottle will last a long time.

First-Born Is Often Upset by New Baby

By GLADYS HUNTINGTON BEVANS.

[Copyright: 1942: By News Syndicate Co., Inc.]

"We have a 3 year old daughter," writes one mother, "who insists upon pushing her little 18 month old brother. He walks, not too steadily, and he often strikes a chair or other pieces of furniture when he falls. I'm afraid he'll be badly hurt one of these days.

"I've explained to Carol that he is only a baby, and she mustn't push him, and that if she keeps it up I'll have to give him away. I've slapped her hands, spanked her, even resorted to the strap, but without evident success. I try to give her more than I give him in the way of toys, so I don't think she can be jealous. What makes her so disagreeable?"

But another mother writes:

"Barbara was 3½ years old when Teddy was born, but she doesn't resent him in any way. I took your advice and prepared her for his coming; showed her his little clothes and the bassinette, and she was excited and eager for his arrival.

"We've bent over backwards, I'm afraid, to see that she has her share of the limelight and our attention. I stop if I'm playing with the baby when Barbara comes into the room, put my arm about her, and tell her to play with him, as I've been doing, and to watch Teddy kick and gurgle and try to reach her hair. When I do the baby's wash Barbara washes her doll's clothes, and the doll and Teddy have their sunbaths together, if Barbara happens to think of it. This method has been most successful, and we are all happy together."

Little Carol's behavior is a very natural response to the arrival of a new baby in the family, but harshness and mismanagement on the part of her mother will strengthen her unconscious resistance to her little brother, and certainly won't help her to understand or overcome it.

It's difficult for the sunniest of children to remain that way in the face of punishment or slapping of hands [the use of a strap is unjustifiable] when all they crave is affection and a place in the sun. An overdose of attention and companionship won't in the least spoil them. As a matter of fact, it helps them to find themselves and to know that they are well within the orbit of their parents' need of them and love for them.

All of this can be so easily accomplished with a little forethought and sincere effort. Little children respond almost magically to tenderness, patience, and understanding interest. If you have a new baby in your household try them.

What causes tantrums? How may a child be encouraged to be neat? What two things help the nervous child? For advice on these and other related topics read "You and Your Young Child." According to Culbertson

[Copyright: 1942: By Ely Culbertson.]

There usually is one hand at every duplicate that becomes sensational before the session is over. Most times, of course, the hand is such a freak that the variety of results around the room is not to be wondered at. At other times, however, there is nothing particularly strange about the hand itself, and this makes it all the more remarkable that so many teams should get in trouble with it. The "jinx" hand for many teams in a recent duplicate was the following:

North, dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.
Match point duplicate.

NORTH
♠ 10 9 6 5 4
♥ 7
♦ A 10 7 4
♣ A Q 7

WEST
♠ J
♥ A J 8 2
♦ K J 5
♣ J 9 6 5 4

EAST
♠ Q 8 3 2
♥ 5 3
♦ Q 9 8 6 3 2
♣ K

SOUTH
♠ A K 7
♥ K Q 10 9 6 4
♦ None
♣ 10 8 3 2

At one table, North-South reached a six spade contract which was doubled and defeated seven tricks, 2,000 points! I venture to say that the East-West team involved felt that here was a "top" that would stand against all comparison. Yet, unbelievable as it may seem, another East-West team did even better! At this other table, the bidding developed as follows:

North	East	South	West
Pass	Pass	1 heart	Pass
1 spade	Pass	3 hearts	Pass
3 no trump	Pass	4 hearts	Double
Redouble	Pass	Pass	Pass

Let us skip over this bidding rather lightly, in order to get to the play. North's original pass was "on the line" and this made him feel that he was entitled to redouble the final contract after South had made the very strong three heart bid. The trouble was that South had nothing like the values for that semiforcing rebid.

West opened the singleton, and declarer won and led a club to the queen. East won with the blank king and returned a low spade. Declarer guessed this correctly, finessing to dummy. West ruffed with the heart deuce and returned a low club. After some hesitation, declarer played dummy's ace and saw it ruffed by East, who returned another spade. Now West ruffed away declarer's king, after which he carefully led his low club for East to ruff. East now returned another spade, and declarer could do no better than discard his 10 of clubs. West thus was assured of making his ace and jack of trumps, and the contract was down four tricks redoubled, for a total penalty of 2,200 points!

Congregational Leaders Open Parley Monday

BY THE REV. JOHN EVANS.

Wartime problems confronting Congregational Christian churches of the country will be considered by official leaders of that denomination in a four day conference opening Monday in the First Congregational church of Evanston. Delegates will include executives of national boards, state presidents, mission leaders, and other officials. The sessions will continue thru Thursday under the chairmanship of Dr. Douglas Horton of New York, minister of the general council of the church.

Dr. Ernest Graham Guthrie, executive director of the Chicago Congregational union, explained that an important problem arising from the war will be the place of meeting of the general council, which is to hold its biennial sessions this summer. Originally the meeting was scheduled for Dartmouth college, Hanover, N. H., but the war requires the use of campus and college facilities for other purposes, he said. Dr. Guthrie will address Congregationalists of the nation over W-G-N and the Mutual Broadcasting system at 2:30 p. m. tomorrow.

A "democracy rally" will be held Monday night in the Morrison hotel under the auspices of the American Jewish congress. Rabbi Maurice Perlzweig, spiritual leader of one of London's largest synagogues, and Ald. Earl B. Dickerson [2d] will be principal speakers.

The Rev. Dr. Armin G. Weng, 860 North Wabash avenue, president of the Illinois synod, United Lutheran church; the Rev. Dr. Martin Anderson of Oak Park, president of the eastern district of the Norwegian Lutheran church, and the Rev. Dr. O. N. Olson of Berwyn, members of the national Lutheran council, will attend the 24th annual meeting of the council which opens Wednesday at Pittsburgh, Pa. The council embraces eight national Lutheran groups and represents about two-thirds of all Lutherans of the nation. Short wave religious broadcasts to Lutherans in occupied European countries will be a principal topic of discussion.

A preaching clinic will be conducted under Chicago Church federation auspices Monday morning in the Central YMCA, 19 South La Salle street. The clinic, led by the Rev. Dr. Oswald W. S. McCall of the New First Congregational church, Washington and Ashland boulevards, and Dr. Harris F. Rall of Garrett Biblical institute, Evanston, will consider the problem of effective preaching in the war emergency.

Bogoljub Jevtich and Bozidar Markovich, ministers without portfolio of the Jugo-Slav government in exile in London, will arrive in Chicago today to attend the anniversary of the celebration of St. Sava, who founded the autonomous Serbian Orthodox church in 1229 A. D. The celebration will take place in Holy Resurrection Serbian church, 1905 Schiller street, tomorrow morning, with the Rt. Rev. Bishop Dionisije presiding, assisted by the Very Rev. Petar O. Stiyachich, archpriest of Chicago. The famous Serbian choir, the Branko Radicevich, will sing the service.

Your Handwriting

BY SHIRLEY SPENCER.

The two young men who wrote the lines above both have wings! I thought they made interesting contrast as one is in the British air force and the other in the American. They are quite representative of our modern young flyers.

The Britisher quite typically writes a heavier script; but note that both use small, simple capitals, and that the writing is compact. There is little of the former individualism and recklessness in the young men who fly today. In nearly every case, technical skill and regulated perfectionism is uppermost in the writing. It is as if each one had become a part of the machine he flies. And when we see the boys in precise formation in the sky, we know that only those who can adjust themselves to methodical accuracy can be a part of that smooth performance.

It seems odd that these gentle mental types can be the men who swoop down with such deadly destruction, but it's their mathematical accuracy that is important, and that is what shows up in their handwriting.

White Collar GIRL

BY RUTH MACKAY.

Lily Takes Offensive.

Lily was new in her job and well pleased with her uniform—white organdy collar and apron over her black serving dress. She had turned out a dazzling dessert which she carried aloft into the dining room like an incense burner.

Her mistress suggested that the neighbor across the hall might enjoy a portion, but that in taking it to her Lily must be tactful and not offend her. Pridefully, Lily strode across the hall.

"Mrs. Clark sent this," she said politely, "and she says for you not to be offensive."

A Sandbag May Help.

The girl who stands on her feet all day may be interested in the statement of Dr. Emil Hauser, orthopedic surgeon, that there are three postures one naturally assumes when standing for any length of time: An "at attention" military attitude [in which one stands as tall as possible]; a relaxed position, in which one shifts the strain, and a normal position.

The important thing, he says, is to come back to the normal upright position so that it becomes habitual.

To acquire the normal upright position [essential to looks, health, and efficiency of the business woman] he suggests balancing a sandbag on the head "in such a way that the weight can be felt thruout the entire back." The bag should be six inches square and two inches thick, loosely filled for the beginner and weigh about four pounds.

Language All Its Own.

The advertising profession has a rich, idiomatic vocabulary. For example:

"Blow-up"—Not an uproar in the office, but an enlargement of an advertisment, to be used for display.

"Does it flow?"—A question often heard in an advertising office, having nothing to do with "Old Man River." It means: "Does the copy read smoothly?"

"Hanging over"—It means one word left over for an extra line.

Misses Only One Thing.

At least one white collar girl looks back on New Year's eve with a shudder. The tale of the plight of a "chic little stenographer in a large downtown insurance office" comes thru the mail.

According to the reader who forwards the story, Dorothea is married. On New Year's eve Dorothea and her husband were invited to a party and she took her evening clothes to the office, expecting to dress downtown. Due to a last minute change in the time schedule, it was decided that she was to come back home and dress.

John works in the same office and often boards the same El as Dorothea. However, he doesn't happen to know her married name or her address. On New Year's eve, as he was hurrying to the Adams street station he met Dorothea struggling with her suitcase and gallantly offered to carry it for her. Together they joined the mad jam on the platform and when Dorothea's train came along, she was pushed and shoved into the car, but John didn't make it, and the closing door left him on the platform with the suitcase still in his hands.

O, yes, John brought her suitcase to the office Jan. 2, everything intact, so that all Dorothea missed was the party!

BY WILFRID SMITH.

While Chicago fans are watching two of the nation's best basketball teams, Toledo and Long Island, play in the Stadium tonight, Minnesota will fight it out with Illinois in Champaign for a share of the Western conference leadership.

The undefeated Illini disposed of Iowa last Monday, 42 to 35. The Hawkeyes were beaten by Minnesota by 2 points, so, even if one does not believe in comparative scores, this points at least to a game that is even up.

Illinois will start four sophomores, Ken Menke and Jack Smiley, forwards, and Andy Phillip and Gene Vance, guards, with Vic Wukovits probably drawing the center assignment.

Ohio Goes to Michigan.

Three games are scheduled in the Big Ten. Ohio State, practically out of the race since the Buckeyes have been licked three times, faces Michigan in Ann Arbor and should pull up to a .500 average. In the third conference game, Indiana will go to Madison to test the revived Wisconsin Badgers, who now boast of three victories after losing their first trio of engagements.

Since the Hoosiers have lost only two games, they will be a threat in the race if they dispose of Wisconsin. Purdue, which has only been whipped once, is not scheduled. The championship battle currently would seem to include Illinois, Minnesota, Purdue, and Indiana with the Gophers' hopes dimmed by the loss of Don Carlson, star forward, to the army.

Don't Forget Iowa.

Because Iowa plays six of its remaining games at home, it may be included in title possibilities. Purdue's handicap is that seven of its remaining 11 games will be played away from home.

De Paul now has been whipped four times in succession, losing a fourth encounter to New York university last Saturday night. Long Island has lost only one of 16 games this season. Tennessee defeated the Blackbirds in the Sugar bowl game, 36 to 33. De Paul made a fight all the way against N. Y. U. and it wasn't until the closing minutes that the visitors opened up a gap that insured victory, despite De Paul's final effort that came within one point of tying.

Long Island Has Three Stars.

Consequently, the De Paul-Long Island contest should be in keeping with the other double headers in the Stadium. Max Waxman, a guard, and Howie and Lon Rader are featured Long Island players.

Toledo is another national basketball leader but Loyola's record merits more than a glance. Lennie Sachs probably has done more with average material than any other midwestern coach, and this year his material, with Mickey Rottner leading the attack, has been more adept than usual.

The Toledo Rockets have won 14 games this season and averaged almost 50 points a game. Their leading scorer is Bob Gerber,

BIFF JONES TO LEAVE NEBRASKA FOR WEST POINT

Named Graduate Manager of Athletics.

West Point, N. Y., Jan. 23 (AP).—The football coaching career of Maj. Biff Jones, guided largely by the war department for 21 years, was ended today by an army order which brings him back to the United States Military academy, scene of his first coaching assignment.

Head coach at the University of Nebraska the last five years, Jones was ordered back to service by the army from which he resigned in 1937 to continue his football work.

He will report to West Point on Feb. 2, officials said, and will succeed Col. Louis E. Hibbs as graduate manager of athletics. Hibbs expects to be given another army assignment.

Jones will have no hand in the coaching of the army football team. "This will mark a departure from what Maj. Jones has been doing at the University of Nebraska," an academy statement said, "in that he is, for the time being, dropping out of the football picture."

Holds New Contract.

At Nebraska, where officials recently answered a mild rumble of discontent among the so-called wolves by renewing his contract for five years, Jones said he would leave within a week to drive to his new post.

His teams at Nebraska won 28 games in 5 years, lost 14, tied 4, and captured 2 Big Six titles. The 1940 eleven went to the Rose bowl, where it lost to Stanford by a touchdown.

Jones was made head coach of army in 1926 after serving as an assistant on the West Point staff for six years. For four seasons he directed the play of the Cadets, then was transferred to the field artillery school at Fort Sill, Okla.

Goes to L. S. U.

In 1931 he returned to West Point as assistant to Maj. Philip S. Fleming, graduate manager of athletics. But the following year he was detailed to Louisiana State university, where he was head football coach.

At L. S. U. Jones differed with the late Huey Long over gridiron policy and resigned in 1934 after his third season there, a season in which Long insisted on leaving his spot on the Tiger bench and entering the dressing room to assist with the pep talk duties.

In 1935 and 1936 Jones was assigned to the University of Oklahoma and was head coach and athletic director while teaching classes in military science.

An army transfer took him away from Oklahoma after two years and that assignment had no connection with football. So, when Nebraska sounded a call for a man to replace D. X. Bible and backed it up with an attractive long term contract Jones left the army to continue on the gridiron.

Omaha, Neb., Jan. 23 (AP).—The World-Herald said tonight it seems certain Back Field Coach Glenn Presnell will succeed Maj. L. M. Jones as acting head football coach at the university of Nebraska.

COWLEY'S JAW IS BROKEN; OUT FOR REST OF SEASON

Detroit, Mich., Jan. 23 (AP).—Center Bill Cowley of the Boston Bruins will be out of National Hockey league competition for the remainder of the season because of a fractured lower jaw suffered last night against the Detroit Red Wings.

Cowley, who last year established a record of 45 assists while winning the league scoring championship, was injured in a collision with Syd Howe of Detroit. X-rays today disclosed five fractures of the lower right jaw. Physicians said Cowley would be out for a minimum of six weeks and that such injuries frequently require three months to heal.

He will remain in Harper hospital here for a week before returning to Boston.

GOLDEN GLOVERS AWAIT CALL TO BATTLE MONDAY

Final Physical Checkup Attracts 196.

BY WILFRID SMITH.

Battle lines for the north and south side Golden Gloves champions have been drawn. Last night the final group of 196 amateur boxers qualified in the tests at Trafton's gymnasium and were assigned to the sectional meets.

The south side championship bouts will start Monday in the St. Sabina gymnasium, 78th place and Racine avenue. Eight novice and eight open division champions will be crowned Wednesday evening. Each will receive a gold medal.

North side fighters open their sectional warfare Wednesday night in the Loyola university gymnasium, Sheridan road and Loyola avenue. Open and novice champions will be determined Friday. Thus, the personnel of the city championship show, which will be held Feb. 12 in the Coliseum, will be determined.

Watch the Navy Go!

Twenty of the navy's finest—midshipmen, sailors, and one marine—and one of the army's best passed their physical examinations. They will compete at Loyola. The navy men were escorted to the medical room by Lieut. Jim McMillen, once football great at Illinois and nationally famous wrestler, and Chief Petty Officer W. Kenneth Larson.

The only member of the navy group to be rejected was Earl Heinz, who is 17 years old. Heinz was refused permission to box by Dr. William Rothman, head of the corps of examining physicians, because of a rib injury he suffered while sparring with Larry Cramer, also of Navy pier.

Larry Wants to Fight.

Cramer is a middleweight and can't wait until he faces his first opponent. "He loves to fight," Lieut. McMillen said, "but so do the others, including that little fellow over there." By "that little fellow" Jim meant Horace Lindo, 18 year old bantamweight from New York. Cramer and Lindo are entered in the open division.

The lone marine in the group was a novice middleweight, Lloyd Sharpless.

The army's sole representative was Jack McClintock, 23 year old lightweight stationed at Fort Sheridan.

Twins Pass Tests.

Eddie and Walter Baka, twin featherweights of the Madison-Cicero Boxing club, didn't tarry after passing the tests last night. They rushed out to Madison Athletic club on the west side to appear in fights there against Tommy Zafore of Hammond and Melvin Patterson of Savoy Athletic club. Eddie scored a fourth round technical knockout over Zafore and Walter beat Patterson.

Stanley Berg, Franklin Park featherweight, who is only 16 years old, also fought on the card after successfully passing his first Golden Gloves test last night. He conquered Jimmy Warner of Evanston.

Admission at all shows next week will be 75 cents. There are no reserved seats and when the doors open a half hour before the start of the bouts, early arrivals will get front row locations. Reserved seats now are on sale for the city championship bouts in the Coliseum. Tickets are $1.10 and $1.65. Mail your request to Golden Gloves Ticket Manager, Tribune Tower.

Have AAU Sanctions.

All Golden Gloves centers are sanctioned by the AAU. The Central association has jurisdiction over Illinois centers, as well as the Chicago title bouts and the Tournament of Champions. Capt. Roy E. Davis, former chairman of the United States Olympic Boxing committee and the National AAU boxing committee, is chairman of the local association's boxing group. Edwin Parkes is the secretary. Inspectors are Douglas C. Warnes, Edward Blohm, Maurice Wolff, and Paul Staff.

A Familiar Ending of Cue Meet

Ad Schacht, Sox Trainer, Dies After Heart Attack

Seattle, Wash., Jan. 23 (AP).—Adolph F. Schacht, Chicago White Sox baseball trainer who never saw an entire ball game in his life, died today—just a few weeks before he was to report at the Sox training camp in Pasadena, Cal.

Schacht, 57 years old, suffered a heart attack as he and his wife were stowing fishing gear into a small boat near their Alki beach home. His death marked the passing of one of the Pacific northwest's outstanding figures in athletics.

Joined Sox in 1934.

After years as a trainer of the Seattle Pacific Coast league club, Schacht went to the White Sox in 1934. His ministrations were largely responsible for the fine condition of White Sox pitchers thru the years. Ted Lyons, the veteran who had arm trouble in the mid '30s, blossomed anew under Schacht's care.

Schacht decided at an early age he wanted to be a doctor, but he did not have the money to pursue the education. The little Dutchman performed his first "operation" on a horse, after watching a veterinarian do a similar job. As he grew older, Schacht went to work on the athletes.

He'd sit around the dressing rooms of baseball clubs in his undershirt. He'd only look out occasionally to scrutinize the pitchers. He could tell how the game was going by the roar of the crowd.

A Successful Treatment.

His prize story was about a 240 pound Seattle southpaw pitcher named Jumbo Jim Elliott. Elliott, strong as a bull, thought he needed some of Ad's bone cracking to put him in shape.

Little 130 pound Adolph surveyed that broad back and decided he couldn't dent it. So Ad pulled some peanuts out of his pocket, put them on Elliott's back and crunched down on 'em with his knees. To Elliott it sounded like the roof caved in.

Big Jim got up, stretched, said, "that's great, the trouble's all gone," then went on to complete a season with 26 victories.

Come Out Swinging!

If you want to be sure of good seats for the annual Golden Gloves tournament, it's time to start swinging your fountain pen. Mail orders are being accepted now for tickets to the Chicago finals in the Coliseum on Feb. 12 and for the Tournament of Champions in the Stadium Feb. 23, 24 and 25. The reserved seat price scale follows:

Chicago finals, Feb. 12, $1.10 and $1.65.

Tournament of Champions, Feb. 23 and 24—50 cents, 75 cents and $1.10.

SEARCH FOR SUCCESSOR

Following receipt of the death of Trainer Dr. Ad Schacht yesterday morning Vice President Harry Grabiner of the White Sox immediately contacted Manager James Dykes, who is wintering in California. The names of possible successors were discussed and an effort will be made to fill the vacancy immediately. Names of those discussed were not revealed, but it is probable that Eddie Froelich, now trainer of the Blackhawks and who served the Brooklyn Dodgers in a similar capacity for one season, will be given consideration if he can obtain release from his present duties.

YESTERDAY'S RESULTS.

BY CHARLES BARTLETT.

Minnesota's football teams have been good these last several years. Everybody knows how good Joe Louis is. To these we would like to add the fact that the Kid Himself is still good too.

The Kid Himself, of course, is Willie Hoppe, who last night won his third consecutive world three-cushion billiards championship by defeating Welker Cochran, a mighty good boy himself. The score of the decisive match in the Terrace Casino of the Morrison hotel was 50 to 31 over a 36 inning stretch. And it might be added that the contest was far more interesting than the 19 point difference would seem to indicate. That, perforce, was expected.

Welker Has Been Champion.

One reason for the full house, naturally, was the fact that Cochran himself had held this world angle crown three times. More important, of course, was the memory of that 14th game in which Hoppe engaged in last year's tournament. He had won all 20 of his duels in the 1940 tournament and was rolling along toward a similar clean mark last winter until he met this same Cochran. That broke the incredible streak of the man who grew up from a knickered prodigy called Willie to be known as Mr. Billiards. Cochran won that match by 50 to 40.

The 54 year old champion's record now stands as one of the most remarkable in modern sports. Bill has won 44 of his last 46 matches in world competition. He touched off his latest show by averaging two points an inning for the best game of the 1942 tournament. He suffered another defeat this year, rather amazing in view of the fact that it was administered by Arthur Rubin of Brooklyn, who at the time had lost his first four games.

Champion Starts Slowly.

Last night Willie had his faithful following on pins and needles thruout the early part of the match, but finished strong and thereby had the option of collecting first prize of $2,500 or $3,321.25 in defense bonds. He chose the latter. Cochran was rewarded with $1,750, while Ralph Greenleaf, 18 times pockets champion, and Jose Chamaco, one time national title holder, went away with $1,375 as their shares of the tie for third and fourth places.

Hoppe ran 7 for his high in the 15th, not to mention a six in the 29th, while Cochran's best were the threes he compiled in the 5th, 11th, and 17th.

Bill Takes Charge.

Those threes apparently should not have created too much commotion, but they did. The first enabled Cochran to move ahead of Willie, 7 to 4. The next sent him up, 12 to 9. The Californian, who learned his billiards in the same block in which he lost last night, kept punching away until he had built up a 16 to 9 margin. The situation obviously no longer was funny. Sure, Welker is good, but how come he could be out in front by seven points over the Kid himself.

The Kid promptly adjusted the problem. He ran four in the 15th, seven in the next, and three in the 16th, just to move into a 23 to 16 lead. A blank in the 17th was followed by an ace in the 18th, and he arranged the intermission by dashing off three in the 19th for a 27 to 19 edge.

In the afternoon matches yesterday, Greenleaf moved into a tie with Chamaco by defeating Jake Schaefer, runnerup the last two years, 50 to 42, in 51 innings, while Joe was yielding to Art Thurnblad, 50 to 40, in 53 innings. Scores by innings:

HOPPE—201 011 201 010 047 301 301 000 403 162 000 312—50. Innings, 36; high run, 7.

COCHRAN—200 230 020 031 210 030 011 211 002 210 000 001—31. Innings, 36; high run, 3. Referee—Jack Van Horn.

THE GUMPS—IT'S NO JOKE TO MILLIE

A City and a Sports Department

(The Tribune Grows Up with Chicago)

[This is the twenty-first of a series of articles on the highlights of the development of sports in Chicago, with especial reference to the part played by the Tribune sports department in reporting them, from pre-Civil war days to the present time.]

BY CHARLES BARTLETT.

IF HE had lived, the man would have been 78 years old this very day. Yet he founded and nourished for seven years what its present conductor, Arch Ward, called on June 14, 1937, "a rich heritage." That heritage, of course, is The Wake of the News, the department which has enjoyed the longest continuous career of any sports column in America, one that is now in its 38th year.

The man was Hugh Edmund Keough, in his time the brightest wit in American sports writing, many of whose shafts and verses are still used in these times. On the night of the day he died, June 9, 1912, the usual banter around the old Tribune sports department on the third floor of the then offices at Madison and Dearborn streets was well below par. A memorial wreath was laid across the rolltop desk in the corner.

Hugh E. Keough, who founded The Tribune's In the Wake of the News column in 1905. He died June 9, 1912. The Wake is the oldest sports column in the United States.

Clare Briggs Penned a Tribute to Him, Too.

The late Clare Briggs, whose "Days of Real Sport," "When a Feller Needs a Friend," "Ain't It a Grand and Glorious Feeling?" and "Somebody Is Always Taking the Joy Out of Life" became cartoon classics in the Tribune sports pages, sat him down the next day and penned his own tribute to Hugh, as reproduced elsewhere on this page. He

It was fitting that the caption for that obituary drawing should be, "A Good Old Pal's Gone Out." For all of his candor, Keough was capable of a type of sentimental writing that rang true, without any semblance of straining. This was particularly encased in a poem which he did upon the death of a friend, and which not only Hugh himself repeated, but also several of the successive conductors of the Wake. It was called "A Good Old Pal's Gone Out," and is reprinted herewith:

Let's lay aside the lighter thought
And pause a little while;
Let's give a voice to feelings pent—
Let tears usurp the smile.
Let grief reign where the laughter was,
And let us cease to doubt
That friendship lives beyond the grave—
A good old pal's gone out.

Hughey, or as he was better known thru his signature of "By HEK," died at the age of 48 after an illness of six weeks. It was proper that his boss of that period, the late Harvey T. Woodruff, should write the story of how HEK "went out," as, Harvey pointed out, Hughey would have expressed it himself.

He Had a Long and Thoro Newspaper Background.

Keough was born on Jan. 24, 1864, in Hamilton, Ont. He received his newspaper baptism on the Spectator in his home town, and then journeyed on to papers in Indianapolis and Logansport. He came to Chicago and his sharp work earned him a position as sports editor of the Chicago Times at a time when, as Mr. Woodruff pointed out, "a sports editor was required to know every subject."

He served the Times for seven years and then went on to the New Orleans Item and the San Francisco Chronicle in a similar capacity. Eventually he turned to Chicago, and his weekly contributions to THE TRIBUNE, from his post as managing editor of the Lake County Times, were such, under the title of "Some Offside Plays," that he was induced to join the staff. Here it was that he founded the Wake of the News in 1905.

Mr. Keough did not confine himself to mere typewriter punching. He was noted on all American race tracks, particularly in Chicago and in the south, as an active patrol judge. He used the Wake as a futile, but brave, instrument, to seal the longtime breach between Charley Comiskey and Ban Johnson, both of whom were honorary pallbearers at his funeral.

Of HEK, Mr. Woodruff wrote, a number of years later, the following:

"He was, to my mind, the greatest sports columnist of all time. He could be vitriolic or tender, he could be subtle or obvious, he could write verse or prose. His greatest forte, in my opinion, was his gift for concise wit, often so subtle that it was over the heads of a majority of his readers. After his death, his works were issued in a de luxe edition and still sell, so enduring was the name he made. His 'The Lay of the Hospital Race' is the greatest bit of sporting humor and satire I ever have read. His 'A Good Old Pal's Gone Out' I still republish occasionally when some one dear has passed."

He Started the Wake of the News in 1905.

HEK was the man who originated the Wake, the column that has gone on thru an unbroken career since 1905. Following Keough's death, Hugh Fullerton served as conductor until the appointment of Ring Lardner in June, 1913. Ring continued for six years, until he resigned in June of 1919 to devote his time to free lance writing in New York. Jack Lait succeeded Lardner for five months, after which Mr. Woodruff took over the column, conducting it until his death in 1937, after which Arch Ward moved into the conductor's rôle.

The Wake of the News, it should be pointed out, enjoys the largest regular circulation of any sports column in America. Daily, it attracts 400 to 500 contributions. Probably the best testimonial to its power is the fact that the Wake Book, the annual compendium of the best contributions and lines, is sold out within two weeks.

Feb. 6 Boxing Is Called Off by Coliseum

Inability to obtain suitable opposition for Joe Maxin, Cleveland light heavyweight, and Tony [Cianciola] Martin, Milwaukee middleweight, will cause cancelation of a show scheduled in the Coliseum Feb. 6, Matchmaker John Strachan indicated yesterday.

The card had been planned for the benefit of President Roosevelt's Infantile Paralysis fund.

Because Promoter Ross Miller does not care to conflict with the Golden Gloves tournament in Chicago Stadium Feb. 23, 24, and 25 and March 6, the charity show will be postponed until March. The dates available in the Coliseum in that period are March 2 and 31.

Izzy Kline yesterday was reported to have been appointed matchmaker of a program booked in the Stadium Feb. 27 for the benefit of a national defense fund. Tony Zale, middleweight champion, has been asked to appear in a four round exhibition bout on the card against sparmates after his 12 round overweight match with Billy Conn in Madison Square Garden Feb. 13. Nick Castiglione, west side middleweight, who lost a disputed decision to Harry Teaney in the Coliseum recently, also will appear against the best available foe. Jesse Darcy, manager of Castiglione, yesterday said Nickie is anxious to meet Sammy Angott, division title holder, on the program for bare expenses, which wouldn't exceed $200. It was said Buddy Baer, Billy Conn, and Jimmy McLarnin also are being sought as participants. Since McLarnin retired as a boxer five years ago, his rôle likely will be that of a referee.

Frankie Gilmore, Cincinnati lightweight, who previously had been rejected by the Illinois Athletic commission, has been granted permission to meet Nickie Castiglione in Midway arena Feb. 6. Original date was Jan. 30, but because Gilmore is matched to face Freddy Hunt in Zanesville, O., Jan. 26, Promoter Earl McClure settled on the new date.

CLIFTON GETS 20 POINTS IN LAST EFFORT AS PREP

Leads Du Sable to 38-25 Victory Over Kelly.

Du Sable High's senior basketball squad yesterday won its last game with the capable sharpshooting of Nat Clifton, the city's leading center. Clifton, who will be lost by graduation, brought his prep athletic career to an end by scoring eight baskets and two free throws to lead Du Sable to its fourth straight victory against Kelly, 38 to 25, in the central section of the Public School league on the Kelly court.

The triumph enabled Du Sable to become the only unbeaten squad in the section. It was Kelly's first defeat in three games. Du Sable held a 16 to 13 advantage at the end of the first half.

Harrison Tech, Phillips, and Tilden Tech also won sectional senior contests. With Rube Barish starring, Harrison Tech whipped Lindblom, 31 to 29, on the latter's floor. Phillips, with Sherman Howard scoring three baskets and five field goals, won from Gage Park, 32 to 21, in Gage park gymnasium, and Forest Bauchamp's last minute field goal gave Tilden Tech a 34 to 32 triumph over Farragut on the Tilden court.

SHIPPERS URGED TO HASTEN RAIL CAR MOVEMENTS

Warned Some Have Been Held Too Long.

Continued efficient operation of the railroads must depend to a large extent on speedy and efficient loading and unloading of freight cars, members of the Mid-West Shippers Advisory board were told yesterday at their annual meeting in the Palmer House. For the first time since the emergency started there were reports that some shippers and receivers have not been coöperating to the fullest, resulting in a few cases where freight cars have not been given the most efficient use.

About 300 persons were expected at the meeting but because of the necessity for maintaining the transportation system at peak efficiency more than 500 appeared to get or give first hand information.

Cites World War Lesson.

Robert S. Henry, assistant to the president of the Association of American Railroads, told the group that about the only World war lesson learned and put into practice was that of how to run the railroads. This emergency has seen none of the confusion that was the rule during the earlier war.

"As a matter of fact," Henry said, "we should have learned the transportation lesson in the Civil war, but we failed. Gen. William Tecumseh Sherman was the first military officer to make effective use of railroad transportation and it was only in the campaign for Atlanta that a railroad was used to the fullest advantage. Compare the small freight cars which Gen. Sherman had with our own to realize what Gen. Sherman accomplished.

"Gen. Sherman was the first to learn that an army had to unload its cars promptly—it must not leave equipment in cars. He followed this practice in moving 130,000 men and 35,000 animals down the little railroad to Atlanta."

Says Railroad Helps China.

Henry said that railroad operation has proved most effective to date in the Burma section of the Burma road, which has been China's lifeline in its struggle with Japan. The little narrow gauge railroad has been able to lay down at Lashio—the end of the line—a far greater quantity of supplies than the thousands of trucks have been able to carry over the highway into China.

Fred A. Schleifer, Chicago, who was reëlected as general chairman of the board, disclosed that at a meeting he attended in Washington this week he was assured by federal authorities that the government does not plan to take over the railroads in this emergency. Neither does it propose to deprive shippers of certain rights and functions as long as it remains clear that the job can be done thru voluntary coöperation.

Schleifer said the Mid-West board now has 1,500 members and has created 56 vigilance committees to work for efficient use of freight cars. About 850 men are serving on the committees.

Opposes Transport Rationing.

L. M. Betts, manager, car service division, Association of American Railroads, said the railroads are determined that in this emergency there shall be no rationing of transportation. While government traffic must have preference in car supply and movement, he said, it is believed that commercial traffic will be fully and satisfactorily handled.

Betts said the railroads would have felt better about the situation had they been able to have obtained materials for some 25,000 new freight cars which they had ordered for delivery late in 1941 but which were not built as scheduled. Their program calls for the building of 114,000 new cars in the 12 months which started Oct. 1, 1941, a large part of which they expect to get.

It was announced during the meeting that Joseph B. Eastman, the new transportation director, has accepted the offer of the 13 shippers' boards to work with his organization during the emergency.

INDUSTRIALISTS TO MEET TODAY ON WAR ORDERS

Representatives of industrial associations of 11 midwestern states organized as the Midwest Manufacturers' Associations, Inc., will meet today in the Palmer House to consider programs to speed war production and increase the flow of military orders to the middle west and to smaller plants, James L. Donnelly, executive vice president of the Illinois Manufacturers' association, said yesterday.

Other problems scheduled for discussion are plant protection against sabotage, industrial salvage, training of skilled workers, occupational deferment, coöperation with defense councils and other war agencies.

The protection of small business in wartime will be a major concern of the manufacturers' group, Donnelly said.

Tent Maker Buys Land Adjoining Its New Plant

United States Tent and Awning company, 701 North Sangamon street, yesterday purchased vacant property on each side of the one story building it bought recently at 4637 Elston avenue. The company, which has large government contracts for army tents and other articles, expects to move to the new plant on May 1, an official said.

Henderson Asks Steady Price Level on Flourspar

Washington, D. C., Jan. 23 (AP).—Price Administrator Leon Henderson today asked fluorspar producers today to freeze their prices on this nonmetallic mineral at the Jan. 2 level. He asked that if they found increases necessary, they give the OPA one month's advance notice.

SELECT OVERLOCK AS HEAD OF ILLINOIS WPB CONTRACTING BRANCH

Joseph L. Overlock.

Joseph L. Overlock, a vice president of the Continental Illinois National Bank and Trust company, has been appointed Illinois state director of the contract distribution branch of the war production board, it was announced yesterday. He had been an executive of the priorities division in charge of the defense supplies rating plan until several months ago, when he returned to his bank duties.

At the same time, Clarence Alvidsen, board chairman of the Republic Drill and Tool company, Chicago, was named chairman of the Illinois state advisory committee to the contract distribution branch.

Thomas S. McEwan, Chicago district manager of the contract office, resigned as of Feb. 1. He was summoned to Washington, D. C., to confer with war production officials and was expected to remain as a consultant. A consulting management engineer, McEwan organized the government's subcontracting activities in the Chicago area.

REPORT MANILA BANKS REOPEN UNDER JAP RULE

San Francisco, Cal., Jan. 23 (AP).—Japanese banks in Manila are reopening for business and Philippine banks which "wholeheartedly support the Japanese" will reopen soon, the Tokio radio said today in a broadcast recorded here by the CBS short wave listening post.

Japanese expeditionary forces have ordered the large Yokohama Specie bank to reopen for business immediately, the broadcast said.

CBS recorded a broadcast from proaxis Saigon to the effect that the reëstablishment of business and commercial life in the "occupied territories of the Pacific" would be decided by military authorities in close consultation with the Tokio government.

"It is absolutely forbidden," Saigon radio quoted a Japanese diet spokesman, "to remit Japanese capital to conquered territories. All the capital necessary for rebuilding and developing these new countries shall be furnished by specially created concerns to carry on such work from local sources."

WARNS TRUCKERS ARMS TRANSPORT GETS TOP RATING

It will be just as vital to move war materials with the greatest possible speed as to manufacture them quickly, 300 members of the Central Motor Freight association were told yesterday at the Stevens hotel by Chester G. Moore, association chairman.

He said all truckers expecting to haul armament materials must participate in the pooling agreement worked out by the office of Joseph B. Eastman, director of transportation. Thru this plan the government seeks to utilize truck space to full advantage.

Harry F. Chaddick, association president, assured the truckers they will receive adequate equipment and tires to maintain operations. Maj. Raymond Kelly, regional director of civilian defense, urged the truckers to cooperate with civilian defense in areas they serve.

AIR LINE'S HEAD SEES WAR AS BIG TRANSPORT SPUR

Gearing of the aviation industry to meet the huge production demands of the war program will mean that air transport lines will be able to serve thousands of communities after the war, compared with about 200 cities in which direct air service is available at present. Croil Hunter, president of Northwest Airlines, Inc., said yesterday.

Hunter discussed postwar prospects of the industry in a report on the 1941 traffic of the company. He said Northwest planes flew 59,668,674 revenue passenger miles last year, compared with 51,175,254 in 1940, a gain of 16.6 per cent.

The line carried 127,946 passengers on its Chicago-Pacific coast route in 1941, against 111,608 in the preceding year. Many of the passengers, Hunter said, were persons in government and military service or employed by businesses having armament contracts.

VALUE OF ILLINOIS '41 BUILDING PERMITS RISES 18.2 PER CENT

Building permits for all types of construction issued in 163 Illinois cities during 1941 amounted to $143,113,656, the Illinois department of labor reported yesterday. This is 18.2 per cent above the 1940 total of $121,111,510, and is 45.2 per cent above the $98,539,656 total for 1939.

The value of permits for new residential construction was 24.8 per cent higher in 1941 than in 1940; for new nonresidential construction it was 9.6 per cent above 1940. Alterations, repairs, and installations were 11.4 per cent higher in value.

December, 1941, building activities in Illinois cities were slightly below the November level, but substantially above December of 1940. There were 2,131 permits for all types of buildings valued at $8,626,044 issued last month. In November there were 2,650 permits, valued at $8,814,870. In December, 1940, there were 1,854 permits, with values totaling $7,121,532.

Seventy per cent or $6,013,192 of the total permit valuations thruout the state in December, 1941, were for new residential buildings; 16 per cent, or $1,372,256, for new nonresidential buildings, and the remaining 14 per cent were for additions, alterations, repairs, and installations.

200,000 ILLINOIS TRUCKS OFFERED FOR USE IN CRISIS

Owners Respond to War Department Queries.

Springfield, Ill., Jan. 23 [Special.]—Illinois truck and bus owners are willing to make available to the federal government about 200,000 vehicles if the war emergency demands their use. E. Alston McNatt, who is in charge of the Illinois phase of a war department survey, said today that the figure is a conservative estimate of the number considered satisfactory equipment for federal use under lease.

Ninety-five per cent of the owners answering the war department questionnaires are signifying willingness to lease equipment, McNatt said. Those unwilling to so commit themselves include operators of bakeries, laundries, and dairies who report their business could not be conducted without trucks.

Would Lose Them Anyway.

"In these cases," McNatt said, "the emergency would probably shut the businesses down anyway, and the trucks would be available."

Owners of farm trucks have been nearly 100 per cent in replying affirmatively to the "Would you lease" question, McNatt said. Many farmers proffered their services as drivers should they be needed.

"The return has been very patriotic," McNatt said. "We have answers from about 90 per cent of the truck and bus registration and the survey should be 95 or 97 per cent completed by the end of January.

"The big fleet owners have responded splendidly, both in respect to getting their answers in, and in offering their trucks and buses.

Full Registration Is Goal.

"Those who have been missed in the survey should write for questionnaires to the highway traffic advisory committee to the war department in Springfield. We are attempting to reach the entire Illinois registration of trucks and buses for 1941, as well as the new registrations."

The survey excludes fire trucks, ambulances, and some other miscellaneous equipment.

Registration of equipment in the state which is included in the survey is placed at 243,000 units. About 25,000 have not been heard from.

About 315 persons, taken from WPA lists, are at work on the survey, McNatt said. The force will be cut to about 100 on Feb. 1 and to 15 or 20 after March 1. The smaller force will be semi-permanent to keep the survey up to date.

ERIE RAILROAD VOTES PAYMENTS ON BONDS, STOCK

New York, Jan. 23 (AP).—Directors of the Erie Railroad company today voted a payment on April 1 of $45 interest per $1,000 general mortgage income bond and four quarterly dividends totaling $5 a share on the $5 preferred stock, to be distributed March 1, June 1, Sept. 1, and Dec. 1.

The recapitalization of the road was completed on Dec. 29, and the payments will be out of 1941 earnings, the company said.

Net income after fixed charges in 1941 jumped to $7,930,527 from $14,263 in 1940, the largest since 1929. Gross revenues for last year totaled $106,845,420, up 23.4 per cent; net operating revenue $34,696,312, up 39.1 per cent, and fixed charges amounted to $13,848,016.

January carloadings, the company said, were running about 10 per cent ahead of January, 1941.

2 FIRMS TO GET TREASURY FLAG FOR WAR BONDS

Detroit, Mich., Jan. 23 [Special].—For the first time anywhere in the country, new treasury department flags will be awarded Sunday to the Chrysler corporation tank arsenal and the Great Lakes Steel corporation by Henry Morgenthau Jr., secretary of the treasury.

The flags will be given in recognition of each company's achievement of 95 per cent or more employé participation in the treasury's pay roll savings plan for defense bonds and stamps. The flag is 9 by 5 feet with a blue background on which is a white Minute Man. Circling the Minute Man are 13 white stars.

Great Lakes Steel has about 8,000 employés. Chrysler employs about 3,000 in the tank arsenal. All companies that obtain 95 per cent or more employé participation in defense bond buying are eligible to receive the flag.

U. S. STEEL UNITS SET OUTPUT AND TRAFFIC RECORDS

A series of all-time records in production and movement of iron ore, limestone, and coal during 1941 were established by subsidiaries of the United States Steel corporation, the company announced yesterday.

The Oliver Iron Mining company, Duluth, Minn., produced iron ore tonnage of 34,127,982 net tons, compared with 26,193,055 net tons in 1940. The Pittsburgh Steamship company, another subsidiary, brought to lower lake ports a record volume of the ore, as well as record shipments of limestone and coal.

SWOPE NAMED AS AID TO TREASURY CHIEF ON WAR PROBLEMS

Gerard Swope.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 23 [Special].—Gerard Swope, former president of the General Electric company, today was appointed a special assistant to the secretary of the treasury.

In order to devote his full time to the new position, Swope will resign the chairmanship of the New York City Housing authority and a directorship which he holds in the National City Bank of New York. He will become "general adviser to the secretary on a great variety of business problems that arise in the conduct of the department," it was stated.

Swope was assistant director of purchase, storage, and traffic on the general staff of the army during the World war.

COURT DECIDES AGAINST LEWIS IN UTILITY CASE

Refuses His Petition to Force a Sale.

The United States Circuit Court of Appeals yesterday affirmed an order denying Frank J. Lewis, chairman of the Federal Reserve Bank of Chicago, permission to file a petition thru which he hoped to force the Ogden corporation to sell him certain securities. Ogden is controled by the Atlas corporation, of which Floyd B. Odlum is president, and is successor in reorganization to the old Utilities Power and Light corporation.

The litigation involves an agreement made in 1939, between Lewis and the trustee for U. P. & L. under which Lewis was to have purchased for $1,600,000 certain securities and control of the subsidiary Central States Power and Light and Central States Utilities corporations.

Supports Judge Holly.

The Circuit court supported Federal Judge William H. Holly, who ruled against Lewis last May.

Dissolution of the Central States companies is contemplated under an integration plan filed with the Securities and Exchange commission. A hearing on the proposal is scheduled for Feb. 3 before the SEC.

The Circuit court based its decision in part on a ruling that the Lewis purchase agreement was not pertinent to the U. P. & L. reorganization.

Directed to Pay Fees.

The court directed Lewis to pay $1,640 in fees to John R. Heath, special master appointed by the lower court to hear Lewis' motion.

Lewis had contended that Ogden corporation had fraudulently acted to prevent SEC approval to the transaction after it had received the securities from the U. P. & L. trustee.

BIG LEND-LEASE PURCHASES BUOY BUTTER AND EGGS

Wholesale egg prices advanced ½ to 1½ cents a dozen yesterday and some grades of butter rose ¼ cent a pound. The gains chiefly reflected the lend-lease purchase of 5,729,750 pounds of powdered whole eggs, the equivalent of nearly 17½ million unbroken eggs, and 88 cars of Wisconsin cheese.

January refrigerator eggs set a new seasonal peak on the Chicago Mercantile exchange at 33¾ cents and February fresh contracts reëstablished a 13 year top. Final gains were .35 to .55 cent a dozen, light profit taking having shaved early advances.

Butter futures advanced early but closed unevenly on department of agriculture predictions that butter probably will not share in the substantial advances likely to be made by other dairy products this year. January contracts closed unchanged at 34.1 cents.

PACKAGING, ONCE SALESMAN'S JOY, NOW A HEADACHE

War Compels Wide Hunt for Substitutes.

BY LLOYD NORMAN.

Fair haired favorite of merchandising in peacetime, packaging has been transformed by the war into an industrial problem child as research laboratories hunt substitutes for tin, plastic, pigments, inks, and coatings, a survey of the container industry in wartime revealed yesterday.

Packaging is undergoing revolutionary changes, it was learned. Many of the new forms forced upon manufacturers by wartime restrictions are winning consumer acceptance and may become permanent. Other substitute containers and wrappings are not entirely satisfactory and will disappear after the war ends.

Commercial artists, engineers, and designers, who have made packaging a vital vehicle for selling goods, observed that the public generally still is unaware of the changes being wrought. To a large segment of the public, they said, packaging usually is what's thrown away.

Candy Bars First Affected.

Among the first important departures from traditional packaging was the use of paper wrapping to replace foil on candy bars. Starcity of tin, lead, and aluminum prompted many candy manufacturers to devise new types of wrappers.

Thruout the entire packaging industry, barrels, bottles, boxes, cans, crates, cartons, cases, tubes, wrappings, envelopes, and other forms of protective covering are being subjected to new experiments as the search continues for substitutes.

A survey of the supplies of materials needed in the industry reveals serious shortages of many materials, such as nitrocellulose for lacquers, fancy papers, and artificial leather, imported and synthetic drying oils, alkyd rosins for metal decorating, bottle caps, container linings, tin, rubber, and certain adhesives. Box board deliveries are slow, and steel drums are hard to get.

Expects Further Revisions.

As the military demand for packages increases and more of the raw materials normally used in packaging goes into military channels, the industry expects important revisions in its products. These are some of the changes which may come within a few months or later in the year:

Glass will be a common substitue for vacuum packing of foods and the glass industry will enjoy peak production. Paperboard packaging will be of simplified design. Cellophane and other transparent warppings will be used more sparingly or eliminated entirely for some uses, such as in gum and cigaret packages. Tin cans will be restricted for military requirements and foods which cannot be stored otherwise. Coffee probably will be sold in paper bags or glass jars. Substitutes for tin cans will be tried—possibly lacquer, rosin, or rosinlike coatings on black iron sheeting.

Develop Alternate Containers.

Already the packaging industry has developed alternative containers and wrappings. One firm has brought to the threshhold of commercial use a can with fiber sides and metal top and bottom. Another has found a silver-like glaze for paper wrappings. Dow Chemical company offers a flexible plastic semitransparent tubing to replace copper and other metal tubing.

Research laboratories, however, often find themselves stymied in the hunt for substiutes because the substitute material becomes scarce itself. This occurred with plastics and rubber.

Container Corporation of America, for example, has developed two new containers to replace the tin can. Both require rubber to lock out air and moisture. These new packages are not available for consumer distribution, but are being employed by the government to pack frozen foods for lend-lease shipment and to pack concentrated rations for paratroops.

People and Events

Arthur M. Nolan has been named to succeed A. H. Davis, who is retiring, as general western passenger agent for the Grand Trunk-Canadian National railways, with headquarters in Chicago. Davis began with a predecessor company of the present organization in 1910 and has been western passenger agent since 1934.

A. H. Davis.

Augustus M. Rode, assistant treasurer of the International Harvester company, will address the Chicago chapter of the Controlers Institute of America, Tuesday evening in the Union League club.

The third section of the executive leadership and training course, sponsored by the Chicago Junior Association of Commerce and conducted by the Illinois Institute of Technology, will be started about Feb. 10. The program is conducted in the form of lectures and round table discussions lead by professors and leading business men.

The Bond Club of Chicago will hold its annual meeting Feb. 7 at the Palmer House. Edward K. George, Harriman Ripley & Co., has been nominated to serve as president of the organization during 1942.

Harold L. Klagstad has been named a director of the Illinois Society of Certified Public Accountants. He succeeds George F. Brewer, now serving with the army air corps in an advisory capacity.

Fred G. Phillips, associated with the Hewitt Rubber corporation, Buffalo, N. Y., for 36 years, has retired as Boston branch manager of the firm, a position he has held since 1918.

Dr. Henry Gilman, professor of organic chemistry at Iowa State college, discussed the uses of organometallic compounds at a meeting of the Chicago section of the American Chemical society last night. The meeting was held in the Stevens hotel.

NEW FEDERAL EXCISE TAXES FALLING SHORT OF COLLECTION GOALS

Washington, D. C., Jan. 23 (AP).—Disappointing colections on the new federal excises enacted a few months ago foreshadowed difficulties for congress and the treasury today in their search for 7 billion dollars more in taxes asked by President Roosevelt.

Officials said that the new excises which went into effect last Oct. 1 are bringing in far less revenue than expected, with two exceptions.

Licenses for bowling alleys and pool tables, expected to yield $1,300,000, already have turned in $1,203,316 in three months. The licenses on slot machines and pinball machines have yielded $4,708,696 and were slated to bring in only $4,600,000.

On 14 other taxes collection in October, November, and December amounted to $27,150,000, against an estimate of $272,400,000 in a full year. These taxes are paid a month late, however, so collections represent really a two month rather than a three month record.

Here are the official revenue figures:

BOND OFFERINGS REACH LARGEST AMOUNT IN YEAR

New York, Jan. 23 [Special].—Bond issues offered the public this week totaled $152,835,000, the largest volume for any week since 1940. Bond financing aggregated $24,735,000 last week and $48,530,000 a year ago.

Interest in the corporate bond field centered on the competitive sale and reoffering of 80 million dollars of Alabama Power company 3½ per cent bonds. Offered by a group of 81 bankers headed by the First Boston corporation and Bonright & Co. at 101¼, the bonds quickly went to a premium of more than 2 points.

Tax exempt borrowing was featured by the sale of 50 million dollars of New York City serial and assessment bonds to a syndicate of 131 members, headed by the National City bank and the Chase National bank. The bonds were sold quickly upon reoffering.

Steel Company to Expand Two Pennsylvania Plants

Pittsburgh, Pa., Jan. 23 (AP).—The Pittsburgh Steel company announced today an additional $7,319,000 construction program to expand capacity of its plants at Monessen and Allenport, Pa.

HOGS UP ON NEWS WICKARD IS GIVEN PRICE RULE VETO

News that Secretary of Agriculture Claude R. Wickard would have power to veto any ceilings placed on farm products if the price control bill passes in its present form, coupled with the fact that the lowest ceilings permitted in the bill are substantially above current live stock prices sent the hog market up 10 to 20 cents at the stockyards yesterday.

Yesterday's top price was 20 cents higher at $11.75 a hundred pounds, within 10 cents of the winter's peak. Buyers paid a 10 cents higher average of $11.45, within 10 cents of the highest daily average since September, 1937.

An improved tone developed in the market for cattle, but the effects of the changed price control bill was not as pronounced as in hogs. Farm resistance to recent price declines strengthened. It was estimated that between 40 and 50 carloads of steers were held off the market for next week's selling. Prices in most classes of cattle held steady to strong.

Lambs fell 15 to 25 cents, the top loads sinking to $12.50, off 15 cents for the day.

DETROIT STRIKE THREAT AVERTED BY ARMY ACTION

Detroit, Mich., Jan. 23 (AP).—Busy buses and street cars carried war-job workers to their factories as usual today with a strike threat by city employés wiped out at least temporarily.

Members of the City Employés union [AFL] voted at a mass meeting last night to postpone the strike, called for 4 a. m. today, upon being warned by Undersecretary of War Robert F. Patterson that a walkout would "imperil production of planes, tanks, and guns."

Union officials said a referendum depending on the outcome of negotiations with the city over demand for a 15 per cent wage increase would be taken next week.

Police Commissioner Frank D. Eaman had ordered 4,000 bluecoats on emergency duty to back up Mayor Edward J. Jeffries' declaration giving "full police protection" to all persons desiring to work.

LOW-PRICED RAIL LIENS PACE RISE IN BOND MARKET

New York, Jan. 23 (AP).—Low priced railroad loans continued to pace a generally rising bond market today. Additional gains were posted for the majority of active South American issues, while Australian obligations declined.

Trading expanded to $11,508,100, face value, from $10,780,800 on Thursday with a substantial portion of the turnover again centered in a group of rails.

United States government loans showed little change either way on the stock exchange and over the counter.

HELLER PROFITS CUT TO $535,030 THRU TAX BOOSTS

Finance Firm Prepared for War's Dislocations.

Walter E. Heller, president of Walter E. Heller & Co., Chicago, expressed hope in an annual report to stockholders yesterday that the company can "safely and profitably" employ its funds despite changes resulting from war. He disclosed that a doubling of federal tax liability reduced last year's earnings below the 1940 level.

Net income of the instalment finance and factoring company for the year was $535,030, equal to $1.68 a share, compared with $581,177, or $1.86 a share, in 1940. The provision for federal taxes was $360,085, against $161,913 in 1940.

"There will be dislocations, already apparent," Heller asserted. "Some products we have financed in the past will for the duration of the war be restricted.

Some Products Prohibited.

"Some industries producing products whose component parts contain materials needed in national defense will be prohibited from production and sale.

"On the other hand demand upon us has been heavy from those industries whose sales have increased rapidly due to increased consumer demand or increased defense needs and from those industries which have come into being as a result of the defense program.

"The company's portfolio has and will continue to undergo changes. The management is sanguine that by adjusting its operations to altered conditions it can safely and profitably employ the company's funds."

Furniture Mart Gains.

The American Furniture Mart Building company, Chicago, reported net profit of $356,804, or 40 cents a share, in the fiscal year ended Nov. 30, compared with $305,245, or 25 cents a share, in the preceding year.

Albert Pick & Co., Chicago hotel and restaurant supply house, disclosed its 1941 earnings were $171,245, equal to 98 cents a share, against $71,104, or 38 cents a share, in 1940. Chairman Maurice Rothschild and President I. S. Anoff described the year as the most successful since the company's reorganization in 1932.

American Hide and Leather company reported that in the six months ended Dec. 31 it earned $522,527, or 68 cents a share, compared with a net loss of $25,953 in the corresponding 1940 period.

Ickes Recommends Boost in Texas Oil Production

Austin, Tex., Jan. 23 [Special].—Petroleum Coördinator Harold L. Ickes has certified to the Texas railroad commission his recommendation that Texas oil wells be permitted to produce 1,596,000 barrels daily during February. This represents an increase of 23,500 barrels over his January recommendation and 119,900 daily above the December estimate of the United States bureau of mines as Texas' share of the national market demand.

CHICAGO AREA JOB PROBLEMS TERMED ACUTE

Arms Plants Lack Skilled Workers.

Rapid shifting of industry from peace production to war production has created two labor problems in the Chicago area, a survey of labor leaders showed yesterday.

Howard O. Hunter indicates priority layoffs will continue.

Problem No. 1 grows out of the establishment of new plants and the expansion of old ones devoted to making war materials. These plants are already feeling an acute shortage of skilled workers.

Problem No. 2 is the growing unemployment in the building trades and factories making goods for civilian use. One important cause of this is the lack of essential materials, withheld under priority rules.

Hope to End Shortages.

The war plants, the survey disclosed, are hopeful that their labor shortages will be relieved as workers are released by the priority pinched companies. However, building trades union officials said that the future of their men was gloomy and that unless the government constructs new buildings in the Chicago area thousands of men will be out of work.

Machinists are much wanted for war work. A war production plant manager said that any machinists let out of his job could get into a taxi and find a job open for him the minute he arrived in an arms plant.

Howard O. Hunter, work projects commissioner, indicated that the priority layoffs would continue and that national unemployment would reach 5,500,000 by June. He estimated there are 3,500,000 unemployed in the country now.

Many to Go to War Plants.

Other officials said that many of this new crop of idle would be absorbed in arms work, but could not guess at an exact figure. They added that the severity of the unemployment situation would depend on how fast the country's facilities could be transferred into war work. They estimated that 12 to 14 million workers would be in the armament plants by Jan. 1, 1943.

Metal, rubber, textiles and chemicals are the principal materials which the civilian production plants lack. Eugene Brock of the Social Security board said that the out of work were less numerous in Illinois than in nearby states, particularly automobile producing states.

Few of the building trades workers are fitted to move over without training into arms plants, unionists said.

Ordnance Plant an Example.

As an illustration, the ordnance plant at Wilmington in Will county has been finished and the hundreds of builders are thru. The same thing has happened at the new Buick plant in Melrose Park. In these plants thousands of new workers have been hired.

With normal home building almost at a standstill, the union men are up against difficulties. Metal pipe isn't available for plumbers; wire and light equipment can't be had by electricians; painters can't get brushes and some kinds of paint; carpenters are short of nails and screws and the plasterers are held up on metal lath.

A number of building men were looking forward to work on the 30 million dollar enlargement program at Great Lakes naval training station. Their leaders said this would be only a stopgap and called priorities real focus of their troubles.

Few Local Union Additions.

Altho a committee investigation by congress showed that unions over the country had taken in a large batch of new members, and collected fat initiation fees from them, the local union heads said their additions had been few.

They said they had taken back old members who obtained withdrawal cards in the depression years, and that the members paid no new initiation charges.

Charles Sand, secretary of the Carpenters union, reported that most of the 22,000 members in Cook, Lake, and DuPage counties were still working, but were fearful that all private work would end soon.

Arthur Wallace, secretary of the Painters district council, said that 35 per cent of the 20,000 painters in the area were out of work.

"We can't make up our losses unless something is done to allow private industrial production," Wallace said.

Reports Slight Prospects.

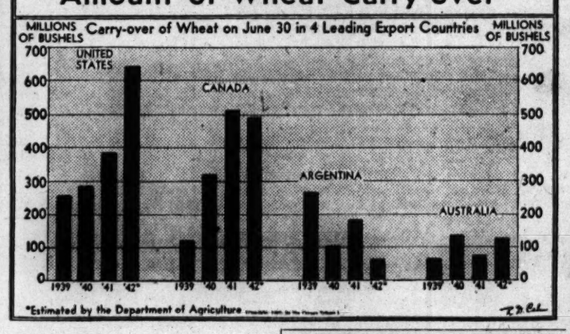
Vath Martin, business agent of the Architectural Iron Workers union, asserted his men had not had a great deal of work recently and had slight prospects of getting even that much in the near future.

E. C. O'Toole, recording secretary of the Plumbers union, said it was becoming difficult for plumbers to get work, largely because of priorities on iron pipe, copper tubing, and other metal products.

Cigar and Cigaret Output Sets New National Record

Washington, D. C., Jan. 23 (AP).—Cigaret and cigar production hit new records in 1941. The treasury said today that on the basis of revenue stamp sales, production of small sized cigarets increased from 180,662,787,772 in 1940 to 206,429,766,365 last year. Production of cigars rose from 5,355,408,619 to 5,787,235,511.

Amount of Wheat Carry-over



Grains Reach New Peaks on Price Bill Pact

BY PHILIP WARDEN.

Grains jumped 1 to 3 cents a bushel to sell at the highest prices in several years on the Chicago Board of Trade yesterday as congressional agreement on price control legislation set off a wave of buying. Corn and rye sold at the highest prices since 1937 and oats highest since 1928.

Wheat closed ½ to ¾ cent higher at $1.32¼ a bushel for May delivery. Soy beans topped 32 a bushel before profit taking and hedging sales sapped early strength from the market. Lard moved sharply higher in early dealings on reports of large lend-lease purchases of lard and pork.

Bill Permits Big Advance.

Back of the advance was the price control bill provision that stated the minimum price ceiling that could be established for grain prices was 110 per cent of parity. Parity is a computed price intended to give farm commodities the same ratio to nonagricultural commodities that existed during the 1910-'14 base period regarded as the most favorable period for American farmers.

Grain men estimated yesterday that 110 per cent of parity currently would be $1.57 a bushel for wheat, $1.12 for corn, 70 cents for oats, $1.35 for rye and $12 per hundredweight on hogs. Thus, before consideration is given to the fact that parity may have been raised by price advances in nonagricultural commodities since Dec. 15 when the last estimate of parity was made, wheat could go up approximately 26 cents, corn 22 cents, oats, 10 cents, rye 60 cents and hogs $1 or less.

Study Loan Crop Policy.

The principal question in the minds of the grain dealers was whether the price control bill will force the department of agriculture to lift its present ceilings on wheat and corn prices.

With its Commodity Credit corporation holding millions of bushels of corn for sale at 83 cents a bushel in Chicago and more millions of bushels of wheat which are offered to the Chicago grain men at $1.31 a bushel, the government has frozen prices in the open market at close to these levels.

With corn for May delivery selling at more than 89 cents a bushel, elevator operators sought to make large purchases of the government-owned corn but the Credit corporation refused to sell except to buyers who could show an immediate need. It announced it was withdrawing all offers to sell at Kansas City, Omaha, St. Joseph, and St. Louis, but made no formal announcement in Chicago.

ADVISE CREDIT CURTAILMENT IN GROCERY LINES

Credit men attending the Midwest Food and Confection Manufacturers Credit conference yesterday at the Knickerbocker hotel generally agreed that a gradual curtailment of credit to wholesalers in the grocery, confection and drug fields is advisable, F. H. Wheat, spokesman for the group, said.

At a convention of National Brands, brokerage organization representing 425 wholesale grocers, in the Congress hotel several hundred wholesale grocers heard E. W. Mau, manager of the advertising and merchandising department, caution against curtailment of their advertising programs because of the war.

"The whole reputation and standing of a company which took years to build," he declared, "can be fundamentally affected by cutting down or stopping of the advertising which made the public know about that company and its products."

Fairbanks-Morse to Rent Plant for Diesel Engines

Washington, D. C., Jan. 23 (AP).—The navy department confirmed today arrangements whereby the former plant of the Stover Manufacturing and Engine company at Freeport, Ill., will be rented to Fairbanks, Morse & Co. of Chicago for the manufacture of Diesel engines or other machinery.

CITY FILES $8,591,660 COMPENSATION SUIT AGAINST PEOPLES GAS

Suit in behalf of the city to collect $8,591,660 from the Peoples Gas Light and Coke company was filed yesterday in Circuit court. The amount represents 5 per cent of the company's gross receipts of $171,833,188 during the years 1931 to 1940 inclusive.

The civil action, according to Corporation Counsel Barnet Hodes, is based on the company's addition of natural gas to its manufactured product, allegedly without paying the city compensation under terms of an ordinance passed in 1906, which provided for the 5 per cent payment.

WPB STEPS UP TRUCK OUTPUT QUOTAS, BUT BARS TIRES FOR THEM

Washington, D. C., Jan. 23 (AP).—The War Production board authorized today an increase in the production of medium and heavy trucks for March—but ruled that they would be minus tires and tubes.

The board said 54,710 medium and heavy trucks could be produced in March, an increase of 34 per cent over the output of March, 1941.

Tires and tubes may be used only during delivery of the vehicles to dealers, after which they must be removed and returned to the manufacturers, the WPB said.

A board spokesman said the government "undoubtedly" would provide for tires and tubes whenever a truck was released for sale under a rationing plan to be adopted.

The board also authorized unlimited production of passenger carriers and truck trailers during March.

Intercoastal Rail Freight Embargo Set

Washington, D. C., Jan. 23 (AP).—Officials of the Association of American Railroads said today they had instructed all railroads not to accept freight shipments intended for movement by intercoastal steamships. They described the embargo as precautionary to avoid tying up freight cars along the two coasts because of the unavailability of freighter space.

Rail men said there had been a gradual withdrawal of freighters from the intercoastal trade since the start of the defense program, and that no space was available for commercial shipments.

"The embargo," an official said, "is simply to protect against freight cars being used for storage purposes such as occurred during the first World war."

LITTLE LOSS TO MIDWEST.

Chicago officials of the Association of American Railroads said last night that the ban on rail cargoes destined for intercoastal steamships will cause relatively little difficulty in the middle west. They said the volume of this traffic has been dwindling steadily since the maritime commission began taking over vessels. No shipments were tied up in Chicago, the officials said.

Rail operating officials were reported confident that they can handle any additional load resulting from the removal of steamships from service between the east and west coasts via the Panama canal.

Handle Most Shipments.

The roads already were handling about seven-eighths of the intercoastal freight formerly sent by water. The additional one-eighth would require about 80,000 freight cars a year, according to one estimate.

The effect of the ban, it was said, will be to increase westbound freight traffic, normally lighter than eastbound shipments. This will mean that roads which have had a large number of empty cars on westbound trips will now have more loaded cars. According to one estimate, four out of every five westbound cars usually are empty.

URGE POST-WAR CITY PLANNING TO EASE SLUMP

Immediate plans for a vast post-war city replanning program to take up the slack in unemployment when war industries slow up were urged yesterday by the Urban Land institute, a subsidiary of the National Association of Real Estate Boards, at its second annual meeting in the Drake hotel. A federal urban land commission with funds and powers to extend grants to local planning agencies was suggested.

Such a commission should have power to condemn land needed for the assembling of large enough sites to assure the creation of new neighborhoods, the institute declared. The coöperation of government and private enterprise in replanning and rebuilding American cities was advocated.

Paul E. Stark of Madison, Wis., was elected president of the institute, succeeding Walter S. Schmidt of Cincinnati.

Interstate Machinery Co. Buys Northwest Property

The Interstate Machinery company, 1431 West Pershing road, manufacturer of metal fabricating machinery, yesterday bought from the American Hide and Leather company the vacant southwest corner of Elston avenue and Blackhawk street, 264 by 408, for an indicated $40,000. It is understood Interstate intends to construct a warehouse and manufacturing plant to cover the entire property when conditions warrant it. Its present plant is leased.

Radio Makers Study Part in Latin Harmony

Already working at top speed on military orders for communications equipment expected to total one billion 200 million dollars this year, the radio industry may be asked to aid Pan-American solidarity by manufacturing 750,000 low cost receiving sets for Latin American listeners, it was reported yesterday.

Nelson Rockefeller.

The program was developed by Nelson A. Rockefeller, federal coördinator of inter-American affairs, as a means of increasing radio outlets for shortwave dissemination of good neighbor policy broadcasts. Conferences between Rockefeller's office and the export committee of the Radio Manufacturers' association have been held but negotiations have not reached the contract stage.

Asks At-Cost Manufacture.

Altho details of Rockefeller's plan have not been made public, it was learned that he desired the industry to manufacture at no profit sets which would cost about $12 each. The project, dormant after Pearl Harbor, was reportedly revived as part of the program to unite the Americas in the victory drive.

Radio industry executives asserted that the burden of military orders soon will tax available capacity and that the Latin American project could not be undertaken successfully without straining production facilities. However, they said the industry would coöperate if the government decides the Rockefeller project should be given priority.

Eugene F. McDonald, president of the Zenith Radio corporation, said the industry is shifting rapidly from civilian to military production. The changeover is being accomplished smoothly because the military work does not require important changes in process, personnel training, or machinery, he said.

Civilian Output Curbed.

First quarter civilian radio set production is being reduced 30 per cent below last year's output, and further cuts are expected as military requirements mount.

Because the military services have preëmpted radio factory facilities, temporary shortages have developed in certain types of replacement parts for civilian sets, it was learned.

Chicago offices of the RCA Manufacturing company reported that supplies of some types of replacement tubes for late model radios had been exhausted several months ago, but that replenishments were arriving.

Wartime commercial policies of the company were described by executives at a meeting of midwest distributors in the Drake hotel.

Creates Potential Problem.

The war has also created a potential problem for the phonograph record industry. Altho stocks of shellac imported from India are reported adequate at present for the manufacture of the record blanks, a serious shortage may develop if shipping from the western Pacific continues disrupted.

Frank J. Hassmer, Chicago manager of the RCA-Victor record order department, said the company has begun a campaign to collect broken records and old records made entirely of the shellac compound. He said the shellac will be reclaimed because no satisfactory substitute for the imported product has been found.

Submarine Activity Brings Ship Insurance Rate Rise

New York, Jan. 23 (AP).—Marine underwriters today increased cargo war risk insurance rates on United States Atlantic coastwise shipments to 50 cents per $100 from 25 cents as a result of enemy submarine activity.

EXCHANGES HIT SEC'S PLEA FOR WIDER POWERS

Blame Commission for Trade Loss.

BY JOHN FISHER.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Jan. 23.—Stock exchanges, big and little, today registered protest against attempts of the Securities and Exchange commission to expand its powers of regulation and control over them.

In testimony before the house committee on interstate and foreign commerce, representatives of the exchanges presented vigorous opposition to various proposals for amending the securities laws to give the SEC greater power. The committee is hearing proposals from the commission and the securities industry on proposed amendments to the securities acts in effect since 1933 and 1934.

Schram Hits Expulsion Power.

Just before the committee recessed Emil Schram, president of the New York Stock exchange and former chairman of the Reconstruction Finance corporation, filed a statement with the committee attacking a SEC proposal to amend the securities exchange act of 1934 to give the SEC power to expel exchange members who violate exchange rules and to suspend or withdraw registration of an exchange for failure to enforce its rules.

Ganson Purcell, chairman of the SEC, had told the committee just previously that the New York exchange particularly had failed to discipline its members on occasions because of "powerful cliques in power." Schram retaliated that he was not aware of any influence exercised over the governors of the exchange and declared it will not prove embarrassing to discipline any member while he is president.

Says New Power Isn't Needed.

"In 1934 you gave the commission power to expel exchange members who violate the law or the rules of the Securities and Exchange commission," Schram said in his statement to the committee. "The commission now asks that you give it power to expel exchange members who violate rules of the exchanges.

"I submit that the commission does not need these additional powers. To use the New York Stock exchange as an example, the administrative organization of our exchange has been completely overhauled within the last few years. Our discipline is swift and stern. And we are not hampered in our disciplinary procedure by the cumbersome processes under which the commission necessarily must operate."

Urges End of Police Rôle.

Sidney L. Schwartz, president of the San Francisco Stock exchange, told the committee that the "drying up of exchange business may be attributed to the administrative attitude of the commission itself." He asked the SEC to play the rôle of a "coöperative partner rather than a policeman." He said something must be done immediately to aid the survival of small exchanges.

George P. Rea, president of the New York Curb exchange, supported repeal of section 16 [B] of the securities exchange act which makes an officer, director, or principal stockholder, subject to suit for profits made in selling any of his company's stock within a period of 6 months after purchase.

The committee recessed because of a house vote without hearing Kenneth Smith, president of the Chicago Stock exchange, who was expected to testify. He will be heard next week.

Hart Schaffner Profit Climbs; Packer Terms Outlook Bright

Net Nearly Doubled

Earnings of Hart Schaffner & Marx—one of the nation's major men's tailoring companies — in 1941 showed a substantial improvement over those of the preceding year, Mark W. Cresap, chairman, and Meyer Kestnbaum, president, said yesterday in their report for the fiscal year ended Nov. 30.

Meyer Kestnbaum.

Net profit of the parent company and its subsidiaries was $831,761 after taxes and other charges, compared with $437,776 in the preceding year. Profit of the parent company alone was $381,071, against $160,732.

"Without minimizing the uncertainties of business in these times," the executives said, "it seems appropriate to consider certain elements of stability. Distribution of the company's products is in the hands of a carefully selected group of retail establishments, well distributed over the country.

Confident of Position.

"The company has always dealt with assured and responsible sources of supply. The employés have shown a degree of loyalty and coöperation of which the directors and management are keenly conscious. There can be no assurance as to profits in these times, but there can be confidence that the company will maintain its relative position in the country."

The report said that the company's inventories in November were substantially higher than in the preceding year. A large portion of the increase was represented by goods on hand and in process of manufacture against an increased volume of spring bookings.

Says Supply Will Be Ample.

It was said that the company is certain to be affected by the uncertainties and difficulties which all civilian economy must face while the nation is at war.

Discussing the clothing situation informally during an interview Kestnbaum said there is no reason for hysteria.

"We believe there will be an ample supply of good looking clothing available for men," he stated. "Of course our soldiers will come first."

He said the proposed changes in styling of men's clothing for the conservation of wool should result in a saving of about 10 per cent.

Among the changes under consideration are elimination of the extra pair of trousers, cuffs, and pleatings, and elimination of coat belts.

[Other earnings on page 22.]

Sees Fair Price Rule

George A. Eastwood, president of Armour & Co., predicted yesterday that government control over prices would permit the packing industry to realize a fair profit, thus insuring efficient performance at top speed as its part in the nation's war effort. Eastwood spoke at the annual stockholders meeting in the company's general offices in Chicago.

George A. Eastwood. [Moffett Photo.]

"The company is in a splendid position to handle increases in live stock supplies and demands on productive capacities to meet lend-lease, military, and home consumption needs," Eastwood declared.

"Business of Armour & Co. has been good both in volume and profits since the beginning of the new fiscal year on Nov. 1, and it is hoped that current dividend payments can be maintained.

Back Dividends Uncertain.

"Whether the new year will see payments on back dividends must be determined by continued good earning and the amount of money the company will need to operate on a scale commensurate with increased war and civilian demands."

He was met with a barrage of questions from shareholders asking why arrearages had not been cleared on the $6 prior preferred Illinois stock so that payments could be resumed on the 7 per cent Illinois preferred and common stock.

Eastwood replied that company officials were striving daily to place the company in a position enabling payment of arrears and dividends, and said he hoped that time "was in the not too distant" future.

New Director Elected.

John E. Sanford of Atlanta, Ga., head of the company's fertilizer operations, was elected a director. He has been with the company in an executive capacity for 32 years. Four other directors were reëlected for three year terms.

The Armour family was represented by A. Watson Armour, who presented the names of the five directors, which included, in addition to Sanford, Laurance Armour, and D. A. Crawford, both of Chicago, and Chase Ulman and S. Mayner Wallace, St. Louis, Mo. Sanford replaced the late James A. McDonough.

At a directors meeting held later, all officers of the company were reelected. D. M. Flick, manager of the by-products division, was made a vice president.

NEW RAILWAY TRUCK SERVICE PLANNED FOR 100 CITIES IN ILLINOIS

The Illinois Central railroad will expand its coördinated rail-truck service to cover more than 100 cities and towns in central Illinois with improvements in present schedules of as much as 48 hours, the Chicago Association of Commerce announced yesterday.

Freight will move from Chicago by rail to Mattoon, Springfield, and Kankakee where it will be met by waiting trucks for distribution to central Illinois cities, it was said. Formerly the freight was handled in waycars or local freight trains.

The Illinois Central railroad announced it will convert its traffic department into a service department for shippers and travelers with transportation problems for the duration of the war. This will apply to all company traffic offices thruout the country, it was stated.

RETAIL BUYING RUSH SHOWS NO SIGN OF ABATING

New York, Jan. 23 (AP).—The rush to "stock up" with various types of goods against possible shortages and rising prices continued unabated thruout the country this week with many stores reporting the largest dollar volume in their history.

Dun & Bradstreet estimated retail sales at 20 to 28 per cent above last year on the average with numerous areas reporting as much as 35 per cent gain as consumers bore down on retail counters in increasing numbers and walked away with a wide variety of goods.

"Rather than subsiding," the agency said in its weekly review, "the buying movement at retail showed signs of increasing momentum. Rubber goods and textiles were particularly sought but drugs, radios, soap, canned goods, hosiery, and metal notions were among other items in unusual demand."

HALT EXPANSION OF POWER AND LIGHT INDUSTRY

All New Equipment Will Go to Navy.

BY THOMAS FURLONG.

With power demand at a record peak and still growing, the electric power industry has been brought to a complete halt in its expansion program.

All deliveries of generating equipment scheduled for 1942 to private power companies have been canceled and it is unlikely that manufacturers will be able to make deliveries before 1944 on orders placed last year. Manufacturers were compelled to cancel deliveries to give precedence to equipment for the navy.

Meanwhile, war industries are doubling and trebling their use of electric power. Since the attack on Pearl Harbor the consumption of power has increased greatly in plants turning out tanks, airplane motors, and ammunition.

Reserve Capacity Threatened.

Because the major electric systems of the country have in recent years maintained ample reserve capacity to meet increasing demand, they are now in position to supply the arms plants for months to come without any serious pinch. Inability to get new equipment, however, will cut into the reserve capacity that is normally maintained.

Chicago and other industrial centers that have kept their plants in a high state of efficiency will, of necessity be chosen as the sites for the new war industries now planned. Thus these industrial centers, as well as other sections less advantageously situated, will share alike in the power rationing which is expected to be applied several months hence.

In its initial stage, the rationing of power is unlikely to cause serious inconvenience to civilian users.

May Curb Evening Use.

At first the curtailment will probably be applied during the hours from 4 p. m. to 8 p. m. when the power systems are called upon to meet their peak demand. The orders rationing civilian consumption will come from the government rather than the companies. Electric signs and window lighting during the evening hours will probably be the first to be affected. Household use will not be seriously affected in the opinion of engineers. They point out that the housewife can avoid use of most electric appliances during the hours of peak demand without inconvenience.

Material relief will be given to the power companies when standard time is advanced an hour thruout the country Feb. 9. It is estimated by engineers that this step will cut power requirements during the peak hours by 500,000 to 750,000 kilowatts. In the Chicago area the expected reduction is put at 75,000 to 100,000 kilowatts.

The Commonwealth Edison group of properties, serving an area of 11,000 square miles in northern Illinois, added 161,000 kilowatts of generating capacity to its system last year, bringing total capacity to 2,145,000 kilowatts. This constitutes the second largest power pool in the world, ranking next to that of the New York area.

STOCKS REVIVE SLIGHTLY AFTER DRIFTING EARLY

Many Rails Recoup Losses And Close Higher.

New York, Jan. 23 (AP).—The stock market merely drifted during most of today's session but managed to close with slightly steadier tendencies.

Rails, down most of the time, did better at the last and a handful of specialties which recently have been under pressure managed to tack on 1 or 2 points or so. Minor fractional losses were plentiful.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks was up .1 of a point at 37.4. Dealings were exceptionally sluggish until the final hour, when volume picked up a trifle. Transfers totaled 431,250 shares, compared with 429,670 Thursday.

Tax Doubts Counter Good News.

Commitments were lightened here and there in the forenoon as a precaution against week-end international developments, but a little bidding developed on the idea the market was due for at least a moderate technical comeback.

Fairly constructive business developments still had to contend with tax doubts. The treasury ruling that stock dividends received by share owners were taxable as income failed to disturb sentiment to any noticeable extent.

Disappointment still was in evidence over the reluctance of the rails to put on a stronger rally in response to the passenger fare boost, but more good revenue statements helped prop this group.

Erie preferred "A" moved up a fraction when a $5 dividend on this new issue—recapitalization was completed in December—was declared payable in four quarterly installments.

CHICAGO PRICES FIRM.

Prices were about steady as 17,000 shares were traded on the Chicago Stock exchange yesterday. Eversharp, up ¼ point to 2½, was the volume leader with 1,300 shares traded. Of other active stocks, Chicago corporation, General Electric, and Consolidated Oil were unchanged from Thursday's close and Borg-Warner declined ⅛. In the half hour after the New York close Butler Brothers declined ⅛.

PERSONAL INCOME TAX—10.

The taxpayer who is searching for deductions with which to reduce his net income to a minimum should be careful not to subtract expenses and losses not allowed by law.

In general, no deductions may be made for personal living or family expenses. Do not subtract from gross income the cost of food, clothing, rent or repairs of personal home, education of yourself or dependents, payments on life insurance or insurance on the home or family car, personal medical expenses, servants' wages, expense of an automobile used for personal convenience or pleasure, alimony or separation allowances, or attorney fees and costs incurred in divorce or separation actions.

Other nondeductible items include:

1. Amounts paid to purchase new property or make permanent improvements on old property.

2. Costs of litigation not arising from a business or profession.

3. Expenses and damages paid for libel, slander, breach of promise or for negligence in driving an automobile while not on business.

4. Losses on family transactions.

5. Cost of gifts.

6. Fines or penalties for violating the law.

7. Capital expenditures, such as investments, stock exchange seats or modernization of property.

8. Club dues, if for personal convenience or pleasure, and contributions which bring no trade or professional benefit. Dues to professional or trade associations are usually deductible.

9. Certain taxes, such as federal income and estate, gift, inheritance, social security [when deducted from salary or wages], assessments for property improvements, and sales taxes not levied directly upon the consumer.

10. Loss from a sale of a personal residence not producing income.

11. Political campaign contributions, lobbying expenses, bribes or graft.

12. Losses from illegal transactions or from ventures operated as hobbies or for personal pleasure.

13. Gambling losses. Net gambling gains for the taxable year are fully taxable as income. Net gambling losses, however, are not deductible from gross income. Gambling losses may be used only to offset gambling gains.

14. Bad debts not charged off in the current year or worthless in some other year.

15. Loans repaid.
